The Family Arms of Mather, formerly owned by the Rev. Dr. Cotton Mather. The "identical whetstone owned by Dr. Increase Mather, formerly President of Harvard College, and used by him to whet the knife with which he made his Pens whilst President, and also when he was agent from Massachusetts to the Court of London on account of the Charter of the Colony--It was, likewise used by his son Dr. Cotton Mather when he wrote his Magnalia Christi Americana, and afterward by his son the Revd. Samuel Mather when he wrote the Life of his Father. -- After the Death of the Rev. Saml. Mather, it was for many years used by his daughter Mrs. Hannah Crocker, and for the last time when she wrote a Letter to the American Antiquarian Society," presenting to them the Whetstone, the Family Arms of Mather; and
A Tobacco Box, once owned by Sir Walter Raleigh, and presented by him to Sir William Phips, governor of Massachusetts, who gave it to Dr. Increase Mather; from him it descended to Dr. Cotton Mather; from him to Dr. Samuel Mather; and from him to his daughter Mrs. H. Crocker, whose Chimnies, twenty two years ago, fell down, and the Box was buried in the Ruins, by which means the Lid of it was lost.

[Tipped in, handwriting of Christopher Columbus Baldwin]

Note on the Tobacco Box.

Sir Walter Raleigh was born at Hayes in the Parish of Budley, Devonshire, 1552, and was beheaded in London at the old palace yard, 29. Oct. 1618—

And

Sir William Phipps was born Feb. 2. 0.8 46 1650, at “a despicable plantation on the River of Kennebeck,” and from this is pretty certain that Sir William Phipps could not have received the Tobacco box from Sir Walter Raleigh--

An Indian Image, rudely sculptured, in Stone, supposed to be a Dagon, formerly worshipped by the Indians in their Temple which by tradition existed several centuries past at the Natchés.

Two Axes of Stone used centuries ago by the aboriginies of Mississippi Territory.

An Indian Mummy, so called, or the Remains of a female Indian, entirely exiccated [sic], or dried, with the paraphernatia [sic], (clothing and ornaments) of the deceased, which indicated her to have been a person of some eminence. Those Remains, &c ,were discovered by some people who were digging earth impregnated with saltpeter in the State of Kentucky. The whole were buried eight feet be= low the surface of the ground, between limestone Slabs. The manufacture of the clothing which is of weeds, or bark, curiously woven, is said to be very different from that of the race of Indians who lately inhabited that section of the country; and it is therefore supposed that the body and its accompaniments had been buried a great length of time.

For the Cabinet.

A Pestle made of Granite, found in a Mound on Darby-creek, Pick-away, county, Ohio; supposed to have been used for pounding Maize.

A part of an ornament, worn on the breast and suspended around the owner's neck. found in a Tumulus in Pickaway county, Ohio.

An ornament worn like the former, found in a tumulus at Circleville, Ohio; like the former it is made of a hard Slate Stone. Described in the 1st. Volume of Transactions, accompanied by a drawing.

A Tool supposed to have been used in the manufacture of Show. Its description accompanied by a drawing may be seen in the [?] Vol. of Transactions.

An under jaw-bone, of a fossil shall of one of the an-cient inhabitants, found in a Tumulus near Circleville; underneath which, number 4 was found. the article last mentioned.

A Stone Axe, wellwrought and polished, found in a Tumulus in Jackson County, Ohio, and presented to me by Danl. Hoffman, Esqr.

Fragment of an Ancient brick, found in a Mound, formerly standing near The centre of The round Fort in Circleville, Ohio.

A piece of Cinder found in the [scite?] of The ancient furnaces inside of and adjoining The South end of the wall of The Stone fort on Paint Creek, Ohio. See the drawing of this work in The 1st. Vol. of Transactions. These Cinders lie in abundance There on the Scite of this Ancient "Walled Town."

A part of an ancient Tile, found in a tumulus on Deer-creek, Pickaway county, Ohio.
A small Bag, containing specimens of the rocks where the ancient inhabitants dug for Minerals. These specimens, were taken from Those celebrated excavations in Licking, Perry and Hocking counties. Ohio. They appear to contain sulphurate of Silver, but have not as yet, been submitted to any chemical tests.

An Axe made of granite, interesting only, as it shows the inferiority of Indian Manufactures to their Predecessors in the Valley of the Mississippi. It was found on the surface of the earth, in Circleville Ohio.

A Stone Axe, found in a tumulus near Circleville, described in The 1st. Volume of Transactions. A smaller Axe than the preceeding one found in the tumulus with the article last mentioned. represented by a drawing in The 1st. Volume also.

A beautiful Crystallized quartz, supposed to have been worn as an Ornament, found in a Tumulus in Ohio, a drawing of which, may be seen in the 1st. Volume. Such Crystals, indicate lead in the vicinity, for which reason they are called in popular language in the West, "Blossoms of lead."

A fragment of the large Mirror, found in a tumulus in Circleville. Described in the 1st. Vol. Such 142

Such Mirrors were dedicated to the principal God among the Mexicans.

Minerals found in an Urn, beneath human bones, which had been burned in a hot fire.

Shells found in a Mound near Circleville. They belong to the family of Murea, of Linneus. They are often found in tumuli.

A Stone made to represent a human heart, found in a Tumulus.

Human bones taken from mounds in Ohio.

Specimens of the Sand stones of Pick-away county, Ohio.

Specimens of the rocks of which millstones are manufactured in Ohio. They are The real Bughrstone. The principal seats of these manufactories are Raccoon-creek, Ohio, hence they are called "Raccoon Burrs."

Carbonates of Lime, containing the remains of Seashells. They are common in The bed of The Scioto River, from whence they were taken.

Quartz pebbles, rounded and smoothed by attrition in water, found imbeded in a vast perpendicular mass of them cemented either by a carbonate of lime, or an oxide of iron. They show that they were deposited from water and the Sea shells prove that the Ocean once covered the whole face of this country, included within the Valley of the Mississippi.

Clay found in a Tumulus in Pickaway county, Ohio.

Copy of the Will of the late William Bentley, D.D. of Salem Massachusetts.

Salem, Mass. May 8, 1819. U.S.A.

I make my last will and I give to my nephew W.B. Fowle One Thousand dollars.

I give all my German books, New England printed books, manuscripts not of my own hand, and cabinet with all it contains, to the American Antiquarian Society, and all my paintings and engravings.

I give all my classical and theological books, dictionaries, lexicons and bibles to the college at Meadville, Pennsylvania.

I give to Hanna Crowninshield, D. of Hanna widow Crowninshield, and to Hanna wife of Ct. Armstrong, and daughter of Benja. and Mary Crowninshield, all my plate, to be equally divided between them.

I recommend to my nephew to destroy all the writings of every name in my own hand, and to accept what remains for his services; and I constitute said William B. Fowle my sole executor.

Newspapers for many years past, viz. supposed to be worth $50—. Not bound.

By Isaiah Thomas.

Memorandum.

Files of several newspapers for 15 or 20 years, published in Boston (a waggon load) – belonging to Thomas & Andrews and to Ebenr. T. Andrews — were presented to the Society several years ago, but I believe were never recorded. They are now (unbound) in the Society Library, and I believe they may be valued, at least, — $100 —.
