Front and back covers: Included in the newly digitized and inventoried silhouette collection (americanantiquarian.org/silhouetecollection) are framed items (cover), hollow-cut silhouettes, pieces with painted detail (left), and ephemera such as a relief print broadside advertisement for William King’s silhouettes (back cover). Several impressive digital projects were produced in the past year; read “The Digital World at AAS” (pages 22-26) to learn more about the silhouette inventory and other exciting new projects.

The past year has been one of exciting progress, challenge, and opportunity for the Society. It is our pleasure to report on these activities in the following pages and to invite your continued involvement in the life of this great organization.

On the one hand, we have continued tenaciously to collect, preserve, and make available for research a comprehensive archive of books, newspapers, and other paper documents that tell the story of what is now the United States—from its earliest European exploration and settlement, through the colonial and Revolutionary eras, up through the Civil War and the nation’s centennial anniversary. We are experiencing an unprecedented influx of materials into the Society, as other libraries and historical societies, along with individual collectors, are reevaluating their own capacities and priorities and are turning to AAS as a perpetual safe haven for what they have collected. This is a great boon to the Society and will increase our central role of the nation’s keeper of records for all things printed and written before 1877.

On the other hand, this boon in collecting underscores the imperative that we maintain the stability of our facilities to accept, conserve, house, and protect these materials and ensure our collecting capacity for the decades to come. To that end, we have undertaken a comprehensive plan to completely replace our aging HVAC infrastructure and to build a seven-thousand-square-foot addition to Antiquarian Hall that will also allow for a state-of-the-art conservation lab and a multipurpose public engagement space right off the reading room, fully equipped to broadcast our programs, seminars, and workshops to audiences far beyond Antiquarian Hall. As these exciting plans continue to evolve, we will share more details with you, but rest assured that this project—an undertaking that we as the current generation of stewards of the Society must take responsibility to accomplish—will simply (if not inexpensively) allow for us to continue doing what Isaiah Thomas set us out to do more than seven generations ago. As he himself would say, it is but paying “a debt we owe to our forefathers.”

We are also undertaking to refine how we share the mission and work of the Society with an ever-broadening audience. In recent years, we have fundamentally revamped our digital presence and now present information about our collections and programs in a manner fully compatible with the dizzying array of phones and devices in use today. We have actively embraced various social media platforms, allowing us to reach far beyond our physical campus to audiences we could have scarcely imagined would find our offerings to be of such interest. We are also improving the look of our annual report and other printed material. As these changes come to life over the next year, we look forward to receiving your thoughts about how these publications help you experience and participate in the life of the Society.

None of what is presented in these pages would be possible without the active engagement and generous contributions of our members, fellows, and friends. As we extend our thanks for past involvement and invite support to help us meet the new challenges before us, we welcome all readers of this report to share with pride in all that has been accomplished by the AAS staff; theirs has been yet another year of remarkable achievement.

ACQUISITIONS

The Society’s curators are always actively acquiring new material, scouring book fairs, basements, and eBay, and creating or furthering relationships with book dealers and private donors. The passionate search for new collections that bring the Society closer to housing a complete printed record of the pre-twentieth-century United States is demonstrated by both the volume and quality of new material acquired.

ADOPT-A-BOOK

For nine years, curators have supplemented their acquisitions budgets with money raised by the annual Adopt-a-Book event, which for several years has featured both online and in-person components. It’s a self-sustaining cycle, with many of the items bought with the previous year’s Adopt-a-Book funds finding their way into the listings for the next year’s event. This year, 161 items were adopted by 105 separate donors for a total amount of $17,500.

NEW ACQUISITION HIGHLIGHTS

The Game of Politics, or the Race for the Presidency. Leominster, Massachusetts: W. S. Reed Toy Co., 1889.

In 1889 a toy maker in Leominster, Massachusetts, issued this politically themed board game (above center). Two teams move around the board and try to gather enough votes to get the presidential nomination and then enough Electoral College votes to win. Interestingly, the 1888 presidential election was the third time in history that the winner (Benjamin Harrison) had fewer popular votes but more electoral votes than the runner-up (Grover Cleveland). Possibly this occurrence explains why the Reed Toy Company thought the game would be a success. Purchased from DeWolfe & Wood. Adopt-a-Book Funds.

This spectacular moveable book (above top left) contains circular frames with two overlaying pictures that appear and disappear by pulling the cloth tab. They depict the young Molly feeding her horse and what appear to be pet ducklings. The illustrations were drawn by Florence Hardy Small (1860?-1933), who was among a number of women artists who did illustration work for the late nineteenth-century picture book trade. This book was chromolithographed in Bavaria at the factory owned by London publisher Ernest Nister, who had a transatlantic publishing arrangement with the New York firm E. P. Dutton. Purchased from Susan Liebegott. Harry Stoddard Fund.

This extremely rare file of the third newspaper printed in Idaho starts with issue number one, July 26, 1864 (above far right). The publisher was James S. Reynolds, and in the first issue he states that he hopes to produce a paper that residents of the territory couldn’t afford to do without. Besides trying to get news from back east and California before any other newspapers in the region, the Statesman carried local news of mining and politics. It endorsed Abraham Lincoln for president, and the issue of April 27, 1865, carried the news of Lincoln’s assassination two weeks after the event, the absence of telegraph lines in the region having delayed the news. Purchased from William Reese Co. Harry G. Stoddard Fund.

Rebecca Waln Leaming, Two Children’s Stories, 1863-1864.

Rebecca Waln Leaming of Ashwood, Pennsylvania, wrote these two stories, The Cousins and Ellen Philips, when she was a young teenager. The Cousins is by far the more entertaining of the two, taking place in a fairy land populated by kings, queens, and a giant. The story takes place after a shipwreck, with two sets of three sisters among the survivors. Leaming herself had two younger sisters and perhaps wrote this story to entertain them in their affluent Philadelphia neighborhood. Pictured above is one of Leaming’s thirteen original illustrations, this one of the giant at the moment he sees a couple of the girls. Purchased from Ian Brabner. John T. Lee Fund.
Every collection gift brings us closer to our primary goal of obtaining and preserving one copy of everything printed in America through 1876, and we are profoundly grateful to our donors for so generously contributing to that work.

McLoughlin Brothers Exhibition Preparation

The preparation of objects for an upcoming exhibition on the McLoughlin Brothers publishing house, scheduled to open in December 2017 at the Grolier Club in New York City, was among the high points of the year in the Conservation Department. One hundred forty of the approximately two hundred objects selected—each one more delightful than the last—received conservation. The goal of this work was not to make objects look picture-perfect, but to preserve the signs of usage by “carefree young readers,” as Children’s Literature Curator Laura Wasowicz puts it, and, more importantly, to preserve the evidence of the artist’s and printer’s hands visible in the marks, notations, and inky fingerprints left on original art and proofs.

Housing the Collection

Providing proper storage for collection material continues to be an essential activity. While a variety of boxes, binders, and folders may be purchased commercially, custom enclosures are also fabricated in the Conservation Department with the help of two industrious assistants, Nancy Fresella-Lee and Candace Okuno. The housing of volumes from the Mather Family Library, Dated Books, and Pre-1701 Foreign Imprint collections was completed this year, cumulatively totaling almost one thousand boxes created over several years.

What to Do about Moldy Books?

The department has seen an increase in new acquisitions that need immediate treatment, as sellers on eBay have proven to be less discerning (and transparent) than their professional counterparts, and curators are frequently dismayed by the poor state of new arrivals. Mold-contaminated material is sequestered in a special holding area and remediation work is carried out by conservation staff, typically once per year. Book Conservator Laura Oxley cleaned 2,700 book and pamphlet pages this past year alone.

Disaster Training

This past year twenty-five staff members participated in a hands-on disaster-preparedness workshop, which introduced the basics of triaging and providing “first-aid” to materials affected by a physical disaster, such as flooding.

Just as necessary to the vibrancy of AAS as collecting and preserving, accessibility to the collections—and the constant improvement and expansion of it—is a focus for the Society in its third century. The Cataloging Department continues to improve existing records and enter new ones for previously uncataloged collections, making it easier for readers to find them. The Readers’ Services Department assists several hundred readers, fellows, and students each year by answering reference questions and bringing thousands of items from the stacks to the reading room and class sessions. Fellowships, workshops, seminars, lectures, and tours for academic, K-12, and general audiences bring people and collections together in Antiquarian Hall for powerful research and learning experiences. The Society’s digital presence, which now includes databases, online exhibitions, educational websites, social media platforms, and an ever-increasing stock of freely available images of collection material, makes access to the collections easier for many current library users while also reaching entirely new constituencies. Each of these areas is essential to making the Society a hub for research, learning, and the exchange of ideas.

Library Use by the Numbers

- 649 Individual readers
- 3,106 Reader days of research
- 13,665 Items paged
- 20 Class visits, with a total of 265 students
- 4,049 Images in 291 digital orders
- 48 Fellows in residence for a cumulative total of 80 months
- 233 Public tour attendees
A strong Cataloging Department continues to be core to the Society’s goal of providing easy and thorough access to the collections. The past year was a productive one for the department. The National Endowment for the Humanities (NEH)–funded catalogers continued work on the North American Imprints Program (NAIP) and submitted an application to the NEH for continued funding of that work. The department continued to inventory classed collections, identifying significant numbers of uncataloged titles. It also extracted pre-1821 foreign imprints from classed collections and gathered them into a discrete collection now comprising 2,478 titles. Two student “cataloging campers,” who spent the summer at AAS, created brief records for materials in the Massachusetts Institutions collection.

Cataloging Records Created

- 9,745 Bibliographic records
- 3,222 Authority records
- 1,140 Bibliographic records created by cataloging campers
Engaging scholars in interdisciplinary work with peers and mentors is crucial to the Society’s work as a learned society. The Society’s conferences, undergraduate seminars, regional talks, and weeklong summer seminars offer scholars at all points in their studies and careers an opportunity to explore the AAS collections while learning from leaders in their field and from one another.

Regional Academic Seminars

This seminar series—a collaboration between AAS and the history departments of Brown University, Clark University, and the University of Connecticut—draws on the works of AAS fellows and other scholars in the region to offer a range of interdisciplinary talks at each of the four participating institutions.

FOUR REGIONAL ACADEMIC SEMINARS WERE HELD IN 2015–6:

- T. Cole Jones, assistant professor of history at Purdue University (and Hench Post-Dissertation Fellow), “Captives of Liberty: Prisoners of War and the Violence of America’s Revolution,” April 6, 2016, at the University of Connecticut

Omohundro Institute 22nd Annual Conference
“Native American Transformations” and “Early America at Work”
June 23–26, 2016, at AAS and Worcester Polytechnic Institute

AAS and Worcester Polytechnic Institute (WPI) cohosted the Omohundro Institute’s (OI) 22nd Annual Conference this past summer. Planning took place with close cooperation between OI, AAS Director of Academic Programs Paul Erickson, WPI history professor Willem Klooster, and WPI history professor and AAS member Steven Bullock (elected 1996). Most of the panels, plenary sessions, and roundtables took place at WPI, while an informal social was held at the Goddard-Daniels House. Molly Hardy, AAS digital humanities curator, also presented about the Isaiah Thomas Broadside Ballads Project (see page 24) as part of a panel.
The annual undergraduate honors seminar in American studies provides a select group of students from the local colleges and universities the opportunity to learn research skills and get hands-on experience with original primary source material in a world-class archive with the assistance of a scholar from a related humanities discipline and the expert guidance of AAS staff. The 2015 seminar was led by Kevin M. Levin, a Boston-based independent historian and educator and the author of Remembering the Battle of the Crater: War as Murder (2012).

THE FOLLOWING FINAL PAPERS WILL BE BOUND AND ADDED TO THE SOCIETY’S HOLDINGS:

- Sharon Caulway, Assumption College, “From Bubbles to Beasts: Physical Representations of the Confederacy in Northern Civil War Cartoons”
- Ralph Cola, Assumption College, “The Man Whose Fame Survived All: Public Perceptions of Union General Ambrose Burnside during the Civil War Era”
- Samantha Davis, Assumption College, “The Republican and Religious Woman: The Expanded Role of Northern Mothers and Wives during the Civil War”
- Darren Fial, Clark University, “‘Fully Justified’: The Daily National Intelligencer’s Coverage of the Trent Affair”
- Sarina Lapin, Clark University, “Women and Children on the Northern Home Front, 1861-1864”
- Erez Mirer, Clark University, “Drummer Boys and War Fever: Our Nation’s Youngest Heroes, 1861-1865”
- Emily Potter, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, “Election of 1864: The Perception of the Candidates from Political Organizations to Soldiers”
- Caitlin Swalec, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, “Glory of the 54th: Contributions and Sacrifices of Colored Soldiers during the American Civil War”
- Erich Weltsek, Worcester Polytechnic Institute, “Songs of the 69th: Irish Soldiers and the American Civil War”
This past year’s CHAViC conference was a great success, with an overwhelming response to the call for papers and strong attendance. Speakers explored the diversity of uses of the printed image in early America, including imagery found historically in more than one medium in both two- and three-dimensional formats. Wendy Bellion, associate professor of art history at the University of Delaware and winner of the 2014 Charles C. Eldredge Prize for Outstanding Scholarship in American Art by the Smithsonian American Art Museum, delivered an engaging keynote address, “Representing Iconoclasm: Paint, Print, Performance.”

THE SPEAKERS FOR THE CONFERENCE HIGHLIGHTED THE INTERDISCIPLINARY FOCUS OF THE EVENT:
- Christopher Allison, Ph.D. candidate in the history of American civilization, Harvard University
- Meredith A. Bak, assistant professor of childhood studies, Rutgers University
- Ross Barrett, assistant professor of the history of art and architecture, Boston University
- Dana E. Byrd, assistant professor of the history of art, Bowdoin College
- Justin Clark, lecturer in history, Pennsylvania State University
- William L. Coleman, postdoctoral fellow in American art, Washington University in St. Louis
- Peter Fine, assistant professor of graphic design, University of Wyoming
- Aston Gonzalez, assistant professor of history, Salisbury University
- Louise M. Hancox, Ph.D. candidate in American history and visual culture, University of Arkansas
- Catherine Holochwost, assistant professor of art history, La Salle University
- Christopher Lukasik, associate professor of English and American studies, Purdue University
- Maura Lyons, professor of art history, Drake University
- Christina Michelon, Ph.D. candidate in art history, University of Minnesota
- Kristin Moriah, Ph.D. candidate in English, The Graduate Center, CUNY
- Wendy Wick Reaves, curator emerita of prints and drawings, National Portrait Gallery, Smithsonian
- Susan P. Schoelwer, Robert H. Smith Senior Curator, George Washington’s Mount Vernon
- Amy Torbert, Ph.D. candidate in art history, University of Delaware
- Autumn Womack, assistant professor of English, University of Pittsburgh
- Clay Zuba, Ph.D. candidate in English, University of Delaware
Fellows in Residence

The more than forty visiting research fellowships offered each year enable scholars from around the world and across the humanities and social sciences to visit the Society for anywhere from one month to one year to conduct research in the collections. Ranging from doctoral candidates to distinguished senior faculty to artists, fellows from diverse fields discover common interests and eagerly share research discoveries and new ideas, helping put into practice the model of scholarly generosity for which AAS is so widely known.

Mellon Distinguished Scholar in Residence
Dwight M. McBride, Daniel Hale Williams Professor of African American Studies, English, and Performance Studies and dean of the Graduate School, Northwestern University, “Poetics, Politics, and Phillis Wheatley”

Hench Post-Dissertation Fellowship

The Lapides Fellowship in Pre-1865 Juvenile Literature and Ephemera
Annie Dwyer, lecturer in English, University of Washington, “Pets and Punishment in American Children’s Literature”

“The American Antiquarian Society plays an incredibly significant role nationally and internationally in not only the preservation of American history and culture, but also as a major source for the fostering of new scholarship and knowledge about early America. The library is staffed by talented individuals who generously shared ideas, references, intellectual support, and amazing conversations with me during my residency. AAS’s impressive collections, committed staff, and the community of scholars it fosters through short-term and long-term residencies, combined to provide me with the perfect intellectual environment in which to work on my book on Phillis Wheatley and her critics. I will be forever grateful to the Society!”

Sebastian Herrmann, lecturer in American studies, University of Leipzig, “Imagining (Big) Data”

“My skills as a researcher in historical American print culture grew considerably over the month I spent in Worcester. Not only was I able to learn a lot about different facets of the print world from various curators, many staff members pointed me toward resources I would have never otherwise thought to consult….I would be remiss if I did not also mention the importance of my time up the hill from the reading room in 9 Regent. The facilities made available to visiting researchers are extraordinary. The convenience of access, planning, and staying in 9 Regent created the ideal conditions for one of the most productive months of my career.”
— Robert Mills, Peterson Fellow
I have visited eighteen archives for this project, eight of them as a research fellow, and I have never found a staff so knowledgeable, helpful, and pleasant as the AAS team. In four weeks, I accomplished more than I had in the past eleven months. This stemmed directly from the unparalleled resources, both historical and personnel, I encountered at AAS. I was extremely fortunate to have my fellowship coincide with that of a uniquely generous group of other scholars. Late-night conversations in the house provided encouragement, inspiration, and a host of new ideas. Not since my early years of graduate school have I been able to draw so heavily on a group of peers. These relationships, and the ideas that sprung from them, have created memories and lessons that I will carry long beyond this book project.”

“To begin, I want to thank the leadership of AAS for offering creative fellowships. For visual interpreters of the world like myself, having the time and space to fully concentrate on historic original materials is both essential and precious……In all my years of working as an independent artist, my experience with institutions has varied from project to project. Rarely have I encountered an entire staff as loyal to an institutional mission as the AAS professional team. In every encounter, from the front lobby to the boardroom, everyone was curious, professional, friendly, and very helpful.”

“My time as a Jay and Deborah Last Fellow at AAS has been stimulating, productive, and truly enjoyable. Every morning, I awoke in the Fellows’ House at 9 Regent excited for the day to come. As I entered the hallowed dome, I felt a wave of anticipation, knowing that I might find a new treasure. And many days, I did….AAS is an unparalleled institution not only because of the images, manuscripts, speeches, and books that have enhanced my dissertation. The people—the staff and other fellows—make AAS a truly wonderful and exciting place to work.”

One of the things that made this residency so special was how everyone dealing with me as a poet doing research got it; everyone was on board and willing to ride with whatever odd reason I might want to look at something….Whether I was a fellow or ‘civilian,’ artist or academic, I received the same kind, interested, helpful (and often patient) attention. These ‘frontline’ folks are part of the reason I applied for a residency in the first place. They made me feel that AAS was a welcoming place to do research, that I wasn’t out of place as a poet, that I didn’t have to justify my presence there.”

“This seminar was probably the most productive scholarly endeavor in which I’ve had the pleasure of participating—far more stimulating and educational than grad school seminars and conferences, and much better organized (and more democratic) than a similar seminar I attended….Because the seminar drew participants from a wide variety of the environmental humanities, the discussions were truly interdisciplinary and illuminating.”

“The hands-on afternoon sessions in the archives were expertly curated to fit each day’s subject focus and formed an essential part of my learning at AAS. Beyond exposing us to the wealth of materials housed at AAS, these sessions…[were] the moment when our different discussions began to gel together. Really instructive, really fun!...I’m recommending AAS courses to all of my fellow American lit grad students. Learning about book history alongside archival materials has been the most instructive, most engaging experience in this aspect of my work. Additionally, though the course involved professors, research librarians, and graduate students, I felt that all professional barriers fell away as we learned together as classmates, which made for a low-stress, encouraging seminar.”

— Jordan Wingate

“[It was an] amazing seminar. This program went above and beyond what I expected from this program, and helped me begin my research into the history of subscription publishing.”

— William Skidmore
AS’s public programs invite the public to join in the activities of the Society’s learned community by spotlighting the newest work being done on pre-twentieth-century America and highlighting the innovative work of AAS members and fellows.

“I love speaking at the American Antiquarian Society. To see the reading room, usually a place of quiet study, transformed into a noisy gathering place is just wonderful. And talk about ambiance: Not only is there the rotunda and all those historic books in the surrounding stacks, but up in what I think of as the AAS bleachers over the entryway is the greatest of all artifacts: Isaiah Thomas’s printing press.”

— Nathaniel Philbrick
Engaging new audiences and being an active contributor to the local community are central to the Society’s mission. Community outreach takes the form of providing meeting space, conducting public and private tours, designing hands-on workshops, and organizing class visits. Many of our local members foster those connections, bringing their staff and students into the library for tours and interactive experiences with collection material. In some cases, such as with Lucia Knoles’s (elected 2003) class from the Clemente Course in the Humanities (opposite, bottom), which provides courses for underserved adult populations in Worcester, all of these pieces come together in particularly significant ways. AAS is proud to play a role creating a positive community throughout New England.

The students felt welcome at AAS because it was clear to them that the collections were for everyone and about everyone’s story. And that’s one of the reasons I wanted to be sure to bring the class. One of this year’s valedictorians talked at graduation about how dark and uninviting Worcester seemed when she arrived from Algeria—until she discovered the public library, and the art museum, and Clemente. Now she sees Worcester as a ‘treasure house.’ And so I thought it was time the students saw one of Worcester’s real treasures.”

— Lucia Knoles, Instructor for a Clemente Course
Always looking for innovative ways to make its collections more widely and readily accessible, the Society has enthusiastically embraced all of the possibilities inherent in the digital humanities field. Databases, exhibitions, illustrated inventories, and annotated transcriptions are just a few of the ways AAS has expanded its digital presence this year. The diversity of the projects is key to reaching a range of audiences—scholars, teachers, researchers, and the general public—who are able to engage with the Society’s collections in unprecedented ways.

NEW DIGITAL HUMANITIES PROJECTS

From English to Algonquian:
Early New England Translations
americanantiquarian.org/EngrishtoAlgonquian

Head of Readers’ Services Kimberly Pelkey highlights some of the Society’s earliest imprints in her exploration of how Native Americans and colonists worked together to produce a body of Algonquian-language texts in the seventeenth and early eighteenth centuries. This exhibition focuses on contributions of Native people such as James Printer (Wowaus) and Hiacoomes, whose labor in translating and printing works in the Algonquian family of native languages has largely been omitted.
Mill Girls in Nineteenth-Century Print
americanantiquarian.org/millgirls
AAS partnered with Lindsay DiCuirci’s seminar “Women and American Periodicals” at the University of Maryland, Baltimore County, to create this student-curated exhibition, which drew upon the Society’s serials holdings to highlight the powerful and often controversial presence of the female mill worker in the press.

The Journals of Edmund Quincy Sewall Jr., 1837-1840: A Boy’s Education among the Reformers americanantiquarian.org/sewall
This new online resource, curated by Marcus A. McCorison Librarian Thomas Knoles, includes an introduction to and transcriptions and images of the 1837 to 1840 journals of Edmund Quincy Sewall Jr., a boy from Scituate, Massachusetts, who attended John and Henry David Thoreau’s school in Concord in 1840, boarding in the Thoreau household.

Photographs of the New England Fair by B. T. Hill: An Illustrated Inventory americanantiquarian.org/bthillcollection
This illustrated inventory includes amateur photographer B. T. Hill’s photographs of the New England Fair in the early 1920s. Put on by the Worcester County Agricultural Society and the New England Agricultural Society, these photos document the fair at the third and last location of the fairgrounds, in Worcester’s Greendale neighborhood.

James Fenimore Cooper: Shadow and Substance americanantiquarian.org/JFCooper
Assistant Curator of Manuscripts Ashley Cataldo’s exhibition showcases the Society’s Cooper manuscript materials, including contracts, business records, and correspondence; F. O. C. Darley’s and Alfred and Tony Johannot’s illustrations of Cooper’s novels; and the records from the forty-year Cooper Edition project. Complete with an interactive bookshelf and detailed descriptions, the exhibition invites fresh insights into Cooper’s work as well as mid-nineteenth-century book production.

Photographs of Tuskegee Institute: An Illustrated Inventory americanantiquarian.org/tuskegeecollection
The Society’s collection of fifty-six albumen prints of the Tuskegee Normal and Industrial Institute (now Tuskegee University) in Tuskegee, Alabama, and the surrounding area are now all digitized and available through this illustrated inventory. The images depict the people and buildings that made up Tuskegee Institute during the 1890s.

Silhouettes: An Illustrated Inventory
americanantiquarian.org/silhouettecollection
The just over two hundred items in the Society’s silhouettes collection are fully accessible through this illustrated inventory. The portraits span from the late eighteenth century through the early twentieth century.
ONGOING DIGITAL HUMANITIES PROJECTS

americanantiquarian.org/printers-file

We have completed data entry on the Printers’ File. A dedicated crew of summer staff converted information from 25 drawers of index cards into digital format, and we are now just beginning to organize and analyze data on 6,144 people involved in the early American book trade before 1820. We have also digitized the Printers’ File source cards, which include 25,711 citations to newspapers, local histories, city directories, and other reference materials in our collections. The digital resource will allow users to view the scans of these source cards while also querying the data they contain.

ISAIAH THOMAS BROADSIDE BALLADS PROJECT: VERSES IN VOGUE WITH THE VULGAR

americanantiquarian.org/thomasballads

This year we have further developed the Isaiah Thomas Broadside Ballads Project so that it now includes more than thirty ballads performed by David and Ginger Hildebrand (see pages 18-19) as MP3s on the site. Twenty-five broadsides (and counting!) have also been transcribed with TEI-encoded XML and are available for download.

A NEW NATION VOTES

elections.lib.tufts.edu

On May 1, 2016, work ended on A New Nation Votes, a project to digitize the collection of early American election returns compiled by Philip J. Lampi. The database was funded by a series of grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities and includes returns from all of the twenty-seven states and territories with congressional representation from the nation’s founding through 1825. Included is data on almost 24,000 elections and 51,000 identified individual candidates. The New Nation Votes portal is housed at Tufts University. Lampi, who was awarded the initial NEH Chairman’s Commendation in 2013 and an honorary doctorate from Tufts in 2014, retired from AAS in May 2016.

COMMON-PLACE

common-place.org

AAS’s online journal of early American life, Common-place, launched its updated design last October, a project headed by the Digital Media and Design Department at the University of Connecticut, the current editorial partner. The journal published four full and three interim issues, totaling 112 individual articles. Topics ranged from Mark Twain’s interest in the walking dead to Henry “Box” Brown’s career as a street magician who reenacted his escape into freedom. Issue 15.4 featured an investigation into the only known copy of Frances Watkins Harper’s early book of poems, which Common-place’s “Just Teach One: African American Print” will be publishing as a digital edition in spring 2017.

Right from top: The Printers’ File index cards being scanned prior to data entry; a screen capture showing a playable audio file for “The Embargo: A Favorite New Song”; Philip Lampi in the reading room; frontispiece for King Leopold’s Soliloquy: A Defense of His Congo Rule, by Mark Twain (Boston, 1905).
The Society has created a prototype of one segment of what will eventually be a complete interactive educational website inspired by the one-man theater performance Isaiah Thomas—Patriot Printer that AAS has been touring periodically for seventeen years. With themes of literacy, artisanship, civic engagement, entrepreneurship, and preservation, Isaiah’s story is full of relevance for today’s students across the nation.

With a generous grant from the Ahmanson Foundation, we created this prototype, focused on Isaiah’s apprenticeship and the legal indenture document that bound him to his master, Zechariah Fowle. Included in the prototype is a short film—produced by Northern Lights and partially filmed on location at Historic Deerfield—introducing the document and explaining the story behind it. The user is then able to explore the document through zooming features, transcriptions, and clickable hotspots that provide information about the physical document and its textual content. The document is further contextualized through related primary sources, links, and lesson plans, and eventually a game centered on setting type will be added. Once the site is completed, each segment, or module, will be centered on a different document that was important to Isaiah and his times and will include each of these interactive components.

Social Media

The Society is able to reach unprecedented numbers of people through its social media platforms, many of whom then engage with AAS in other ways, such as coming to do research, attending programs, or requesting an image to use in their own work. Furthermore, the Instagram feed has become a model for other libraries and peer institutions. Collaborations, brainstorming sessions, and conference session proposals with the Boston Public Library, the National Archives, Southwestern University, the University of Miami, the USS Constitution Museum, and the Leventhal Map Center, among others, have all ensued this year from the work done on AAS's feed.

#Hamildays:
A Hamilton-Inspired Journey Through the Stacks
americanantiquarian.org/hamildays

Unsurprisingly, the craze for Lin-Manuel Miranda’s Broadway show Hamilton: An American Musical did not miss the AAS staff this year. Project Cataloger Amy Tims combined her enthusiasms for Hamilton and the AAS collections in a series of Instagram posts on her private account. The Society decided to figure out a way to archive the series to make it accessible to a wider audience, and a new type of online resource was born: the #AASInstaArchive. AAS has gathered all of Amy Tims’s Hamilton posts in one place to create a permanent gallery of this unique style of storytelling and collection exploration.

Since the Society’s founding in 1812, over 3,000 men and women have accepted membership in the Society and participated in making it a vibrant and vital organization. Currently, there are 1,052 active members who share in the stewardship of the Society, its great research library, and its far-reaching programs.

Members work together to fulfill the Society’s mission. In addition to financial donations to the Annual Fund and the endowment, members contribute gifts of collection materials and commitments of their time and talents to advisory boards, committees, programs, or the governing Council. Members also serve as ambassadors for AAS by increasing awareness and appreciation of the Society and its unparalleled collections documenting American history and culture.

The 203rd Annual Meeting took place on October 22 and 23, 2015, and highlighted the great work of several members and fellows. It featured the annual Robert C. Baron Lecture, delivered by Linda Kerber (elected 1981) on her book Women in the Republic; a Collectors Roundtable with William C. Cook (elected 1989), who discussed his collections of Jacksonian materials; a panel presentation celebrating the twentieth anniversary of the Creative and Performing Artists and Writers Fellowship featuring former fellows Stephen O’Connor, Honorée Jeffers (elected 2014), and Ann Lovett; and a presentation by Richard H. Brown (elected 2007) about Revolutionary-era maps.

“It was an enormous pleasure, after nearly twenty years, to revisit the American Antiquarian Society, where I had not only done absolutely crucial research for my book, Orphan Trains, but learned how to be a true scholar. It is, in fact, very possible that were it not for my Creative Artist Fellowship, I might never have been inspired to write my novel, Thomas Jefferson Dreams of Sally Hemings, and so I was doubly grateful to have been asked to speak about that book at the twentieth anniversary celebration.”

— Stephen O’Connor, Former Creative Artist Fellow

“We know AAS members have a deep appreciation for primary sources. We wanted to underscore that the city itself is a primary historical source of the first order. As in Worcester, centuries of the American experience are visible to the knowing eye in the buildings, landscape, and streets we encounter every day. It was a pleasure to help AAS members ‘read’ Hartford with a historian’s eye.”

— Walter Woodward, Connecticut State Historian

“The opportunity to present a gallery talk for my exhibition Gothic to Goth: Romantic Era Fashion & Its Legacy for AAS members was a highlight of the entire exhibition experience for me. I have turned to the resources of AAS—both printed and staff—for every major exhibition and publication project I have undertaken for the past twenty years, and it is one of my proudest accomplishments to have been elected a member of the institution. Thus, I was thrilled to be able to show my AAS friends what I did with the loans that were granted for the exhibition, and with the information that I gleaned from the library. I am very grateful to AAS for all that it has provided me over the years!”

— Lynne Bassett, Independent Historian

As usual, our new acquisitions this year consisted mainly of library materials, but we also acquired a new building that expands the AAS campus. Four Regent Street, located directly across from the library, was purchased from Worcester Polytechnic Institute this summer. All of the furnishings were included in the transaction, making it a convenient and ready-to-use property. In the immediate future, the house will serve as flex space during the renovation and construction work on Antiquarian Hall. Uses will include office, meeting, and staff break space and overnight accommodations for visitors involved with the project.
Robert Comey Achorn, D.Litt.
Robert Achorn, elected to AAS membership in October 1982, died on October 3, 2015. He was a former editor, publisher, and president of the Worcester Telegram & Gazette. He began his career at the newspaper as a reporter and rose through the ranks over the course of forty-one years. He was also very active in community affairs and served on the boards of many Worcester institutions.

David Lynwood Andrews, M.D.
David Andrews, elected to AAS membership in April 1995, died on August 25, 2016. He was an orthopedic surgeon, serving as chief physician in the Fractures Center of Columbia-Presbyterian Hospital. He collected American botanical works and was an amateur historian of American printing. He participated in the AAS PHBAC Summer Seminar of 1993, “Critical Methods in Bibliography and the History of the Book in the United States,” led by Michael Winship.

Gillian Elise Avery
Gillian Avery, elected to AAS membership in April 1998, died on January 31, 2016. She was a British children’s novelist and historian of American and British childhood education and children’s literature. Her 1971 novel, A Likely Lad, won the 1972 Guardian Children’s Fiction Prize, and she was awarded a fellowship at AAS in 1985.

John Brademas, L.H.D.
John Brademas, elected to AAS membership in April 1975, died on July 11, 2016. He served twenty-two years in Congress and more than a decade as president of New York University. Throughout his career he worked tirelessly to promote education and the arts and humanities, as well as services for children, the elderly, and the disabled.

Samuel A. Cooke, B.S.
Samuel Cooke, elected to AAS membership in April 2000, died on December 2, 2015. He was a senior vice president at Morgan Stanley and had a passion for serving the community and philanthropy. A major collector of Pacific and Hawaiian materials, he helped preserve Hawaii’s culture, history, and natural environment. He was chairman of the board of trustees of the Honolulu Museum of Art and the Hawai‘i Community Foundation. He was also the founding chairman of the Nature Conservancy of Hawai‘i and served as president of the Cooke Foundation.

Elizabeth Lewisohn Eisenstein, Ph.D.
Elizabeth Eisenstein, elected to AAS membership in October 1987, died on January 31, 2016. She was professor emerita at the University of Michigan. An American historian of the French Revolution and early nineteenth-century France, she received numerous awards for her scholarship and was well known for her work on the history of early printing. In 1979 she was the first resident scholar of the Center for the Book at the Library of Congress. She attended the 1985 AAS PHBAC Summer Seminar, “The Making of Literate America: Diffusion of Culture Based on Printing, 1759-1850,” led by Stephen Botein.

Lane Woodworth Goss, M.B.A.
Lane Goss, elected to AAS membership in May 2014, died on May 6, 2016. After retiring as a senior executive of State Street Bank, he participated in and supported a number of organizations involved with the preservation and interpretation of early American history and culture. He was a trustee of Historic Deerfield, and, by virtue of deep family roots in New England, he was also a member of the Society of the Cincinnati. He was especially interested in seventeenth- and eighteenth-century history, objects, furniture, and decorative arts.

Gerald Nat Grob, Ph.D.
Gerald Grob, elected to AAS membership in October 1981, died on December 15, 2015. He was the Henry E. Sigerist Professor of the History of Medicine (emeritus) at Rutgers University. A historian of mental health policy and medicine, he wrote extensively on the topic. He received the William H. Welch Medal awarded by the American Association for the History of Medicine in 1986 and was also president of the association from 1996 to 1998.

John W. Grossman
John Grossman, elected to AAS membership in April 1996, died on August 20, 2016. He was a noted graphic designer and prodigious collector of antique Victorian printed ephemera. He served several terms on the board of directors of the Ephemera Society.
In Memoriam

In 1990 he was awarded the Ephemera Society’s Maurice Rickards Distinguished Merit Medal for outstanding contributions to the world of ephemera.

Diana E. Herzog, M.A.
Diana Herzog, elected to AAS membership in October 2008, died on January 13, 2016. She, along with her husband, AAS member John Herzog, was a longtime collector of antique stocks and bonds, banknotes, coins, and financial ephemera. She was a former president of the Manuscript Society and was a member of the Grolier Club. She also edited the magazine Friends of Financial History for many years.

Kay Seymour House, Ph.D.
Kay House, elected to AAS membership in April 1991, died on August 5, 2016. She was awarded a fellowship at AAS in 1978. From 1966 until 1990, she was a member of the editorial board for the Writings of James Fenimore Cooper, headquartered at Clark University and the American Antiquarian Society. She served as editor in chief of the project from 1990 to 2002. In 2005 she completed contributions to books on teaching Cooper, on teaching American history through literature, and on a Cooper novel set in Venice.

Forrest McDonald, Ph.D.
Forrest McDonald, elected to AAS membership in October 1988, died on January 19, 2016. He was named Distinguished University Research Professor Emeritus at the University of Alabama and wrote more than a dozen books on constitutional, economic, business, and Southern history. His book Novus Ordo Seclorum: The Intellectual Origins of the Constitution (1985) was a finalist for the Pulitzer Prize in history. Three of his other books were also nominated for the Pulitzer Prize.

Michael McGiffert, Ph.D.
Michael McGiffert, elected to AAS membership in October 2000, died on July 2, 2016. He was a highly respected scholar and former editor of the William & Mary Quarterly at the Omohundro Institute. He also taught at the College of William and Mary. Over the years, he conducted research in the AAS reading room. At the time of his death he was completing a history of seventeenth-century Puritan covenant thought in Britain and New England.

Jane Porter Wentworth Neale, M.A.
Jane Neale, elected to AAS membership in October 1999, died on May 27, 2016. She worked as the assistant in the AAS Graphic Arts Department from 1987 to 1993, and after her “retirement” she returned as a volunteer. Among other projects, she rehoused the entire collection of glass plate negatives at AAS.

Cheryl S. Needle
Cheryl Needle, elected to AAS membership in November 2013, died on January 20, 2016. An active member of AAS, she was an antiquarian bookdealer for over forty-five years with a focus on nineteenth-century American book and literary culture. In addition to having a knack for finding great items for the Society to purchase, she was also very generous in giving materials that she felt just had to be in AAS’s collections.

Donald Oresman, LL.B.
Donald Oresman, elected to AAS membership in April 1988, died on May 24, 2016. He was an attorney specializing in corporate matters. He worked in private practice for several decades and later became executive vice president and general counsel of Paramount Communications, a publishing and entertainment company. He was a great collector not only of books, but also of images of people reading: prints, drawings, photographs, oils, watercolors, and other visual formats. He was an AAS councilor for many years and served on numerous other boards, including the Library Company of Philadelphia, the Larchmont Library, the Morgan Library, the Writers Room, the Dictionary of American Regional English, and the Yale Edition of the Boswell Papers.

Arthur Michael Pappas, M.D.
Arthur Pappas, elected to AAS membership in April 1987, died on March 22, 2016. He was professor and chairman emeritus of the Department of Orthopedics and Physical Rehabilitation at UMass Memorial Medical Center in Worcester. He once served as team doctor to the Red Sox and for a time was part owner of the team. He was awarded the Massachusetts Medical Society’s Lifetime Achievement Award in 2011.
Henry Leonard Snyder, Ph.D.
Henry Snyder, elected to AAS membership in April 2015, died on February 29, 2016. He was professor emeritus of history at the University of California, Riverside, and the former director of the Center for Bibliographical Studies and Research. He served as a codirector and the leader of the American English Short Title Catalogue team for more than thirty-two years, an endeavor in which AAS has been an active partner and ally. In retirement, he volunteered as librarian of the Book Club of California. He was awarded the National Humanities Medal in 2007.

Roderick Douglas Stinehour, Litt.D.
Roderick Stinehour, elected to AAS membership in October 1966, died on July 2, 2016. His lifetime passion was printing books. From the outset, the goal of his printing company, the Stinehour Press, was “to print books better than ordinarily done, a modest goal and an attainable one.” The press earned a national reputation for the quality of the design, materials, and printing of its books, and printed for some of the great museums, libraries, and scholarly institutions in the United States. In 1990 he was appointed Fellow in the Book Arts at Dartmouth College and taught a course in the book arts and organized the summer Typographic Workshop for twelve years. He received many awards and recognitions, including the Laureate Award from the American Printing History Association and the Certificate of Honor from the American Friends of the Gutenberg Museum in Mainz, Germany.

Anthony Francis Clarke Wallace, Ph.D.
Anthony Wallace, elected to AAS membership in April 1980, died on October 5, 2015. He was professor emeritus of anthropology at the University of Pennsylvania, where he taught for thirty-seven years. A Canadian-born American psychological anthropologist and historian, he was known for his analysis of acculturation under the influence of technological change. His most important work, Rockdale: The Growth of an American Village in the Early Industrial Revolution (1978), is a psychoanthropological history of the Industrial Revolution.

John Eugene Zuccotti, LL.B.
John Zuccotti, elected to AAS membership in April 1992, died on November 19, 2015. He was an attorney and real estate investor active in urban planning in New York City. He was also a renowned civic leader who championed the revival of lower Manhattan after 9/11. In 2006, a private park that had been damaged in the World Trade Center terrorist attacks was restored and renamed in his honor. He formerly served as New York’s Planning Commission chairman and was the first deputy mayor under Abe D. Beame, playing a key role in saving the city from financial collapse during the 1970s crisis. He later held posts in federal government, including assistant secretary of Housing and Urban Development and assistant to Senator Jacob K. Javits.
We rely on the generous support of our donors—past, present, and future—to help cover the myriad expenses of this complex and dynamic organization. Charitable contributions to the Society ensure that the work produced and the services offered here are of the highest quality. For the smooth and successful operation of everything from cataloging, conservation, and acquisitions to readers’ services, publications, and public programs, we depend on the regular and unstinting support of our members and friends. Such generosity forms the backbone of this institution and our donors deserve to take pride in, and share the credit for, our successes.

Donor Spotlight: Szilvia Szmuk-Tanenbaum

Szilvia Szmuk-Tanenbaum (elected 2010) is putting her money and that of her foundation where her passions lie: the world of special collections libraries. A native of Budapest, she earned, in addition to a master’s in library science, a Ph.D. in Spanish literature from The Graduate Center, CUNY, and served for twenty-six years as special collections librarian at St. John’s University. In retirement, Szilvia has been active not only with AAS, but also with kindred organizations such as the Grolier Club, Rare Book School, the Center for Book Arts, the Bibliographical Society of America, and the New-York Historical Society. Always forward-looking in her giving, she has supported digitization efforts, initiated website projects to make collections more accessible, created research fellowships, and made possible career opportunities for younger professionals.

Most recently at AAS, through the Pine Tree Foundation of New York (named in honor of her late husband Charles J. Tanenbaum, a faithful contributor to AAS from the time of his election in 1981), Szilvia has generously supported our pathbreaking work to digitize the AAS Printers’ File (see page 24). In reporting at the end of the year on progress, project manager Molly Hardy wrote, “And we are already making discoveries from the data! Our current research fellows have started using the newly available spreadsheets to uncover how their own research projects intersect with the early American print trade. The current Hench Fellow Brendan Gillis is conducting a comparative study of justices of the peace and other magistrates in the eighteenth-century British Empire. Little did he (or anyone else, for that matter!) know that fifty-seven such magistrates also worked in the print trade. Brendan now has whole new means to make connections between the ways in which print was used as a tool of empire.” With characteristic enthusiasm, Szilvia responded within the hour, “What great news to read first thing in the morning! I am copying members of the Pine Tree Advisory Board, as well as members of my team working on the culinary and Spanish plays websites. The kind of research your database enables scholars to do is what I hope to see happen (in very different fields, and in different ways) with our websites. We can do things now we never could with 3” x 5” cards, and it is exciting.”

DONORS—SPECIAL GIFTS AND ENDEWED FUNDS

Many important acquisitions fall outside of our usual annual budget capabilities. We are deeply grateful for the support of donors for special gifts and endowed funds whose generosity enables us to procure items and achieve goals that might otherwise be unobtainable for us. These gifts are critical to enhancing both the value of our collections and the research experience for scholars of early American history.

Esther Forbes Society

In 1967, Esther Forbes left us an incredibly creative bequest: the estate rights to her body of literary work and all royalties from it, including her famous novel Johnny Tremain, which has never gone out of print. It is in her name that AAS established the Esther Forbes Society, which honors the people who include the Society in their long-term plans through planned giving arrangements. These legacies include everything from collection items to will bequests to life insurance policies, as well as a variety of other assets, each of which has a profound impact on the work of the Society.

We gratefully acknowledge the following members of the Esther Forbes Society:

In October 1857, the first American Chess Congress competition was held in New York City with sixteen participants competing for a three-hundred-dollar purse. The congress attracted extensive press attention and was responsible for popularizing the game in the United States.

This small chess set, with a slotted board and paper pieces, was made in June 1858 by D. Appleton & Company and was intended for use by travelers. The pocket-sized game, which was copied from an 1845 British design by Peter Mark Roget (of thesaurus fame), originally sold for fifty cents, could be folded, and weighed only about three ounces. This “ingenuous invention” sold well and was used for decades by enthusiasts of all stripes, including children, soldiers, and even chess masters such as Sam Loyd. In January 1859, Loyd wrote in his chess column in Boston’s American Union newspaper, “A sigh of relief escaped me, as I stepped into the cars; for I was leaving behind the heat, dust, noise and confusion of a large city. As I had neither book nor paper to interest me, I drew from my pocket, my faithful companion, one of Appleton’s Travelling Chess Boards, and was soon oblivious to all around me.”

We hope you will find this paper reproduction of the pocket chess set, which was so conveniently “adapted for playing games in rail-cars...without disturbing the game,” as enjoyable an entertainment as Loyd did.

To create your own convenient travel version of the game, cut out the pieces (right) and slice slots into the board for them to slide into snugly (as seen in the picture at left)!

As all gamers know, pieces often go missing, and this set is no exception. A blue knight and bishop have been cut out and drawn by hand, and one red pawn is missing altogether. We have left one blank piece (far left of the bottom row) for you to draw your own pawn, just as the owner of the set replaced the other missing pieces.
CORRECT PROFILE LIKENESSES,

(Or no pay required.)

W.M. KING,

Respectfully informs the Ladies and Gentlemen that he shall leave Boston the approaching week; the correctness of his Profiles is so well known, he presumes that those who want will not neglect the opportunity, the Ladies are particularly informed that he takes their Profiles without their faces being scraped with the machine, or their being "under the disagreeable necessity of retiring into a dark room" or having the shadow varied by the flare of a candle, as he makes use of neither.
