EARLY OREGON IMPRINTS IN THE OREGON STATE ARCHIVES

In the Oregon State Archives in Salem rests a vast collection of papers of the provisional and territorial governments of Oregon. The Oregon Historical Society and the University of Oregon Library have microfilms of the collection on twentyeight reels, filmed in 1946 as part of a national project sponsored by the Library of Congress and the University of North Carolina.¹

In the 1950s I checked two randomly selected reels while working on my Oregon Imprints 1845–1870, published by University of Oregon Books in 1968, and found only manuscript documents. So I turned my efforts elsewhere, before and after the publication of my book, until 1979 when a scholar friend looking for something else reeled through another reel and found microcopies of several unrecorded Oregon imprints.

The collection is chaotic in arrangement, with little dependence on chronology or subjects. This is not the result of mishandling in recent years. In 1878 J. Henry Brown commented, with specific reference to the papers of the provisional government: 'The papers . . . are packed up loose in boxes without any system, not sorted or arranged according to dates and subjects.'² The provisional government papers are also mixed

The compiler wishes to acknowledge his indebtedness to Tom Emmens of Eugene, Oregon, who informed him that there are imprints in a collection of provisional and territorial government papers in the Oregon State Archives and who assisted in other ways as this study progressed, and to Margaret Keillor, State Archives reference archivist, and her staff, who devoted many working-day hours to his needs.

² 'Settlement of Willamette Valley,' manuscript in Bancroft Library, University of California, p. 33. Quoted in David C. Duniway and Neil R. Riggs, 'Oregon Archives, 1841-43,' Oregon Historical Quarterly 60(1959):213 See also Hubert Howe Bancroft, History of Oregon, 2 vols. (1886-88), 1:474, n. 10. with papers of the territorial government, and a few state government papers turn up here and there (see no. 708*a*, below). I solved the problem by reeling through all twenty-eight reels looking for printing, collected hard copies, drafted tentative descriptions, and checked against the originals in the State Archives.

The collection, after statehood, was in the custody of the secretary of state until 1931, when the then-secretary, Hal Hoss, concerned about its security in the hazardous capitol building, sponsored an act of the Legislative Assembly transferring custody to the Oregon Historical Society in Portland until fireproof quarters were available in Salem.³ In 1952, after the capitol had burned in 1935 with disastrous destruction of some other archives, the collection was returned to Salem and placed in the Oregon State Archives, then housed in the Oregon State Library building. The 12,281 distinguished items are serially numbered by stamp in order of the long-existent arrangement (some numbers cover groups of related documents), which numbering is reproduced on the microfilm. The stamping was probably done before the collection left Salem in 1931, since a typed receipt from the historical society acknowledging the transfer includes the 12,281 figure. In the 1940s a card index of names and selected subjects tied to these numbers was prepared by the historical society. The society and the Oregon State Archives have copies of the index cards, the University of Oregon Library a microfilm on six reels.

This article describes forty-seven previously unrecorded imprints in the collection and one previously unrecorded lost imprint on the basis of collection evidence (no. L130c). Included are five imprints that are noted in Oregon Imprints as lost: nos. 80a, 241c, 292c, 292d, 292e. The following imprints in the collection are described in Oregon Imprints from other copies: nos. 9, 12a, 24 (number changed to 319a in my master copy of the book), 214, 294, 300, 316, 349, 504. Finally, two pieces are described in published addenda from other copies: no. 80*a*, Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America 66(1972):179–80 (misnumbered, now renumbered no. 80*c*); no. 142*a*, Proceedings of the American Antiquarian Society 86(1976):136–37. These descriptions are not repeated here, though examination of the Or-Ar copies has required some revisions in my master copy of Oregon Imprints.

OREGON CITY, OREGON. Citizens.

To the Legislative Assembly of the Territory of Oregon: | The undersigned, your memorialists, would most respect-|fully represent that they regard with great concern that | portion of the Act of Congress of September 27, 1850, | which distinguishes between persons who have derived from | Dr. John McLaughlin a title to lots previous to March 4th, | 1849, and those deriving titles from him since that time. | . . . | Spectator, Print—Oregon City. | [71 names printed in 4 columns] | [1850.] [29a] Broadside. 21 x 31.6 cm. Text divided into 2 columns by vertical rule.

The reference is to sec. 11 of the Oregon Donation Land Act (see Oregon Imprints, no. 33), which robbed Dr. McLoughlin of his Oregon City claim and invalidated deeds to lots sold by McLoughlin since Mar. 4, 1849. The memorialists were lot purchasers. The memorial pleads only for the relief of such purchasers through deeds issued by the territorial treasurer, not for justice to McLoughlin—which would doubtless have been beyond the power of the territorial government. The Assembly took no action. 1850–51 Council Journal, p. 27; House Journal, p. 46.

The list of memorialists is headed by J. Quinn Thornton, who probably wrote the memorial. See Proceedings of the American Antiquarian Society 86(1976):134, no. 32a. In Oregon Imprints an 1853 petition concerning the Oregon City claim was erroneously identified as an 1850 memorial from Oregon City citizens (no. 30). The error was corrected in Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America 66(1972):179–81. This left the real 1850 memorial in limbo, since no evidence that it was a printed piece had been found. A printed copy has now been found and is here described.

LOWNSDALE, DANIEL H. AND NANCY.

Know all men by these presents, that we, Daniel H. Lownsdale and Nancy Lowns-[dale, his wife, at the city of Portland and territory of Oregon, in and for the consideration of | [blank] dollars ... | ... have bargained and sold at quit claim ... | ... unto [blank] | all our right, title and interest in all those town lots ... in the city of Portland, to wit: ... | ... | ... and we | will forever warrant and defend the same against the claim of any person whatsoever who may claim | the same through or by us or either of us. And we further covenant ... | ... that if we or either of us shall receive patent from the United States, | ... we bind ourselves, or either of us, (as the case may be,) | to make a general warrantee deed to the said lots, for the consideration above described. | ... | [1852?] [61a]

Form. 20 x 30.5 cm.

Concerning the early history of the donation land claim on the townsite of Portland, see History of Portland, Oregon, ed. H. W. Scott (1890), p. 119. Lownsdale had purchased the claim in 1848; by 1849 the land was owned by a company devoted to the development of the city, with three partners, Lownsdale, Stephen Coffin, and W. W. Chapman (see Oregon Imprints, no. 58). The partnership was terminated in 1852, with land still unsold divided among the partners. They all signed an agreement 'that so soon as they obtained legal title they would at once issue deeds to all previous purchasers.' See also Bancroft, History of Oregon, 2(1888):281–89.

The recorded copy of no. 61*a*, concerning sale of lots to the territorial penitentiary commissioners, is dated Sept. 7, 1853. The form was probably printed soon after the termination of the partnership in 1852.

Mr. Ebey's Report | from the | Minority of the Committee | on | D. S. Maynard's Bill for Divorce, | made December 15, 1852. | [short rule] | [Asahel Bush, Territorial Printer.] [67a]

3 p. 16.2 x 24.4 cm. Caption title.

Dr. D. S. Maynard's petition for divorce by act of the 1852-53 Legislative Assembly was received by the House on Dec. 13, 1852 and assigned to a special committee of three, including I. N. Ebey. The committee reported on Dec. 15, recommending a divorce bill (H. B. No. 9), with Ebey dissenting. The House ordered 100 copies of Ebey's report printed (House Journal, p. 34) and referred the bill to the Committee of the Whole; on Dec. 21 committee approval was reported. On Dec. 22 the bill failed to pass: 9 yes, 11 no, 1 excused, 4 absent. Later the same day it was reconsidered and passed: 8 yes, 7 no, 2 excused, 8 absent. And on the same day it passed the Council. apparently without difficulty. The House record seems to reflect moral and legal misgivings concerning legislative interference with the marriage contract, which is the burden of Ebey's report; for some details of the House debate, see Oregon Statesman. Jan. 1, 1853. Legislative divorces were common during the territorial period (see Oregon Imprints, Index under 'Divorce'), though the Assembly, later in 1852-53, passed a law providing for divorces also through the district courts (General Laws, pp. 49-51). Dr. Maynard was the first physician to settle in the Puget Sound country. See O. Larsell, The Doctor in Oregon (1947), pp. 145-149.

Maynard's manuscript petition is in Or-Ar (serial no. 4780). Ebey's report was reprinted in House Journal, Appendix, pp. 5–7, from a different setting of type. Ebey was a member of the Legislative Assembly from Thurston County, where Maynard also resided, which became part of Washington Territory in 1853.

Broadside. 22 x 32.5 cm. Below text, sheet divided into 2 columns for signatures by center double vertical rule.

The petition concerns House Bill No. 40, 1852–53 session, which would have reopened the question of the location of the penitentiary, located in Portland, Washington County, by the 1851 Location Act. One point stressed in the petition is that 'the whole "Location Law" has received the unanimous approval of the Congress of the United States.' See W. L. Adams, Treason, Stratagems, and Spoils, ed. G. N. Belknap (1968), p. 12. The legislative history of Bill No. 40 is too complicated for attention here. What survived after massive amendments reaffirmed the Portland location of the penitentiary. See 1852–53 session laws, pp. 31–34.

Broadside. 21.6? x 22.9 cm. The located copies are damaged, with loss of letters and words along the right side. The bracketed words are, to some extent, guesses.

The notice was probably delivered to selected citizens, principally Whigs. At the Jan. 15 meeting the text of a proposed charter was read and unanimously approved, though there was Democratic opposition when the proposal reached the Legislative Assembly. See Or-Ar collection, serial no. 4504, which includes a report of the meeting, copies of the printed notice, the text of the proposed charter, and opposition petitions (manuscript), all presented to the Assembly. The charter received legislative approval late in January, but with a provision that the mayor of Portland must submit it for a vote of the people and that it must receive a two-thirds majority for final enactment. The vote was taken on Mar. 19, after notices were published in the Feb. 19, Feb. 26, and Mar. 12 Oregonian. The Oregonian gave the measure strong support in long editorials on Feb. 12 and Mar. 12, protesting only the requirement of a two-thirds majority. On Mar. 26 it reported overwhelming approval. The Democratic Oregon Weekly Times had reported the Assembly action briefly and on Feb. 12 had printed the text of the proposed charter but was editorially silent. Nothing about the question has been found in the Oregon Statesman; publication of the Oregon Spectator was suspended while the question was before the Assembly and the voters. A broadside edition of the charter was published after legislative action but perhaps before the popular vote (Oregon Imprints, no. 86).

Form. 19 x 30.3 cm.

This routine printed piece is of interest for two reasons: (1) it is an addition to the brief record of territorial printing in Corvallis during the brief 1855 Corvallis sojourn of the territorial government (see Oregon Imprints, no. 154); (2) as printed, the text was set four times for the production of four copies on a single sheet, which were later cut apart. The four settings show minor variations. The first, alone, has a comma after the blank in line 2 and a capitalized 'For' in line 4. The second has no comma and a lower-case 'for'. The third shares the special features of the second, but line 2 ends with 'United States'; in line 3 'Draft' is capitalized and the line ends with 'United'; and there is no period after 'No' in line 4. The fourth agrees with the second except that 'Draft' in line 3 is capitalized. Or-Ar has numerous used copies of the separated forms, doubtless about equally distributed among the variants. The piece as printed and recorded here is, of course, unused.

Proposes that the question of the granting of liquor licenses be presented to the voters in each precinct in the territory at each general election 'and that the voice of the majority of those voting thereon shall be decisive for or against the granting of license in and for each precinct, for the year next ensuing after such general election.'

The petition was presented at the 1856–57 session of the territorial Legislative Assembly (see House Journal, p. 134). An identical petition, except for change of 'Territory' to 'State,' was presented at the 1860 first regular session of the state Legislative Assembly (Oregon Imprints, no. 504). The two petitions have the same typefaces and most line breaks are identical. No. 504 was certainly set from an edited copy of no. 233c. In its third paragraph, 'secretary of the Territory' becomes 'Secretary of the State,' with 'the' erroneously retained.

To the Honorable the Councilmen and Representatives of Oregon, in Legislative | Assembly met: | The subscribers, ladies resident in Oregon, respectfully represent . . . | . . . that the use of intoxicating liquor as a beverage, and especially as now publicly sold | and used by license of law, is a great evil to the good people of this territory | We therefore, as wives, mothers, sisters and daughters . . . | . . . appeal to your honorable body as legislators and as men . . . | . . . to abate and remove this source | of crime and suffering. And your petitioners, as in duty bound, will ever pray, &c. | [wavy rule] | [1857?] [270a]

1856–57 House Journal, p. 85: 'Wednesday, January 14, 1857 . . . Mr. [T.J.] Dryer presented sundry petitions of citizens of Portland, and also, from the ladies of the same place, and also, of Joseph Pearl and others, on the subject of submitting the liquor traffic to a vote of the people.' Dryer, though he played political games with the temperance faction, was a notorious heavy drinker. His nickname in the Oregon Statesman was Toddy Jep. See Papers of the Bibliographical Society of America 66(1972):181–82. He was doubtless confident that there was no chance at all that he would be deprived of his tipple.

OREGON. Citizens.

To the Honorable Members of the Congress of the United States and of the | Legislature of Oregon. | We, the undersigned citizens of [broken rule] county, Oregon, | hereby most respectfully call your attention to the military and national importance of | the proposed extension of the Pacific Railroad from Marysville, California, to the navi-|gable waters of the Columbia River, via the Sacramento and Willamette Valleys; ... | ... | [tbick-tbin rule] | [1864.] [708a]

Broadside. 19.6 x 31.4 cm. Below thick-thin rule, sheet divided by center vertical rule into 2 columns for signatures.

"... and we most respectfully petition your honorable bodies for such legislation as will give to the companies proposing to construct this Railroad the same Government grants and aid as has been granted to the Central Pacific Railroad, and we will ever pray, etc."

This printed petition, signed by citizens of Marion County, is one of many with the same plea from citizens of the several counties preserved in the provisional-territorial governments collection in Or-Ar; but the texts of all others in the collection are by pen and ink. Receipt of the Marion County petition is mentioned explicitly in the 1864 Oregon House Journal, p. 112: presented by 'Lewis Stout and twenty-one others.' Stout's signature leads the rest on the Or-Ar copy. Receipt of petitions from other counties is also noted in the 1864 House and Senate journal; in the Senate Journal, pp. 71–72, it is reported that the petitioners totaled about 1,000. The 1864 Legislative Assembly passed a law offering state aid (Special Laws, pp. 76–77) and the Senate a resolution requesting the secretary of state to submit the petitions to Oregon members of Congress (Senate Journal, p. 257). Concerning the federal response, see Bancroft, History of Oregon, 2(1888):696–97.

No. 708*a* and the pen-and-ink petitions are documents of the state of Oregon, in spite of the location of the recorded copies. There were beginnings of pressure for railroads in Oregon in the territorial period, but 'Central Pacific Railroad' in the text of all petitions and, on some pen-and-ink petitions, 'Legislature of the State of Oregon' led me to examine early journals and laws of the state. See also no. 698. Or-Ar (serial no. 96). OrHi (microfilm). OrU (microfilm).
