

A Census of American Latin Verse, 1625-1825

LEO M. KAISER

Foreword

No ATTEMPT has yet been made to list the extant Latin verse of early American days. The present census is offered here as a preliminary, tentative effort in this direction. Over a period of twenty years I have examined the numerous early newspapers and magazines, the American imprints up to 1825, manuscripts in American libraries, and a host of other both primary and secondary sources, only partially listed in the accompanying bibliography, to find pieces of original Latin verse written by Americans. It would be naive of me, however, to think that nothing has escaped me.

It affords me much pleasure to record the unstinting help I have received from the Newberry Library of Chicago, Harvard University Library, the Massachusetts Historical Society, Columbia University Library, the Library of Congress, Yale University Library, the Historical Society of Pennsylvania, the Henry E. Huntington Library, the Library Company of Philadelphia, the John Carter Brown Library, the New-York Historical Society, the Library of the Boston Athenæum, Boston Public Library, the Research Department of Colonial Williamsburg, Inc., the New York Public Library, the Presbyterian Historical Society, Princeton University Library, University of Kentucky Library, University of North Carolina Library, Friends Historical Library of Swarthmore College, Library of the College of William and Mary, Haverford College Library, and the American Antiquarian Society. I am in their debt more than words of mine can convey.

Everett Emerson, of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst, editor of Early American Literature, has shown a constant and sustaining interest in and support of my pursuits, and to him I offer a warm gratias!

The periodicals Classical Journal, Classical Bulletin, Classical Outlook, and Classical Folia have allowed me to invade their pages from time to time with studies of a later period in literary history. I am grateful.

Lastly, I acknowledge with affection my debt to Harold S. Jantz of the Johns Hopkins University, Wegweiser extraordinary in early American literary studies.

Introduction

Interest in Neo-Latin poetry, 'une Atlantide oubliée,' in Pierre Laurens's phrase, continues to be strong: witness only the recent anthologies of European Latin verse compiled by Binns, Laurens, Perosa and Sparrow, McFarlane, and Nichols; the regular, wide-ranging columns in the Seventeenth-Century News and the Modern Language Association International Bibliography on current books and articles on Neo-Latin writings; the annual volumes of Humanistica Lovaniensia, which since 1968 publishes only Neo-Latin research and bibliography; Jozef IJsewijn's invaluable Companion to Neo-Latin Studies; and the establishment in 1975 of the Societas Internationalis Studiis Neolatinis Provehendis with its well-attended congresses. In the Acta Conventus of the First Congress at Louvain (pp. 17–27) one may read in the eloquent addresses of IJsewijn and Lawrence V. Ryan just how well Neo-Latin studies are faring.

Despite past and present interest, however, it is not generally known or appreciated that there exists a substantial body of quite estimable American Latin verse written in the colonial and early national periods, widely scattered, to be sure, in manuscripts, broadsides, old and rare books and pamphlets, early newspapers and magazines, and even in cemeteries on gravestone surfaces. Moreover, that there once existed much Latin verse that has not survived seems clearly suggested in the pages of Cotton Mather's Magnalia Christi Americana and other chronicles.

Early literary historians like the Duyckincks and Moses Coit Tyler were, despite the impressive Neo-Latin achievements of the mother country, in largest part unconcerned with American Latin verse, and later researchers have followed in their footsteps. One may hope that just as the attitude of literary historians and critics of Renaissance Latin verse has changed from a certain disdain to genuine appreciation, as Perosa has pointed out (p. xxi), the attitude of American literary historians to America's Latin verse may throw off its indifference. The neglect has been unfortunate, both as to our gaining a rounded appreciation of early American literary activity—for to paraphrase an observation of Leicester Bradner (p. 2), American Latin poetry is a branch of American literature, and its value as such must be examined—and as to our developing an accurate comprehension of a not insignificant aspect of the classical influence in America. To illustrate, Stanley Idzerda in a penetrating review of the Eadie volume of essays concludes that the essayists generally agree with Bernard Bailyn's position that the classics 'are everywhere illustrative, not determinative of [American] thought,' rather than with Gordon Wood's view that the classics 'helped to shape [the Americans'] values and their ideals of behavior' (pp. 581–82). After observing that the essayists on the whole feel 'that those who used the classical tradition the most were not particularly adept in the classical languages' (p. 581), Idzerda calls for more investigation 'to establish the specific influence of the classical traditions' (p. 582).

In an attempt to demonstrate a 'specific influence'—and also preparatory to publishing in the near future an anthology of early American Latin verse—I present this chronologically arranged census of all the Latin poems I have been able to identify over two decades from an extensive examination, aided often by the particular reference works listed in the bibliography, of the sources mentioned above. Remembering what Goethe said of bibliographical-type endeavors, 'So eine Arbeit eigentlich nie fertig wird. . . . Man sie für fertig erklären muss, wenn man nach Zeit und Umständen das Möglichste daran gethan hat,' and resigned to, if not reassured by, Jantz's dictum, 'Perfection in a bibliography is an unattainable ideal' (p. 177), I ask readers to apprise me of pieces I may have overlooked. It may be added that I excluded from this census compositions listed by Jantz as verse which, upon examination, I have found to be prose: Cotton Mather items 39 and 40 (p. 232), 47 (p. 233), 49 (p. 234); and Anonymous items 13 (p. 288), 27 (p. 290), 34 and 36 (p. 291). Robert Hale item 2 (p. 214), which is in English, and Cotton Mather items 42 (p. 233) and 57 (p. 234), which I regard as quotations, are also omitted. So too are items 134 and 701 in Lemay 1972 which are prose, and Lemay 1972 item 676 which has a British author.

Approximately one-third of the items here listed are pseudonymous or are signed by initials. A number of these items may conceivably be British, although I have taken pains always to investigate that possibility. Since as early as 1642 Harvard College required just for admission that the 'Schollar make and speake true Latin in verse and prose, suo ut aiunt Marte,' it may be that some of the items were originally student compositions, which were submitted for publication once their classroom purpose was accomplished. All too rarely do grounds exist for making a conjecture about the identity of an author. Where authors' names are known, brief bibliographical materials are included, though usually only for minor figures. The known poets, it will readily be seen, include in their number not only a good many familiar clergymen, political figures, and writers from New England, which has produced the largest proportion of the verse, but also personages from elsewhere, like John Beveridge, James Logan, Thomas Makin, Benjamin Young Prime, and James Sterling.

Dates of composition obviously are sometimes difficult to determine. I have endeavored to suggest what seems most likely to me, but some future revisions may prove to be necessary.

As to the kinds of poems listed in this census, complete texts of all of which I have examined, elegies and epigrams on death and divers misfortunes constitute the largest group of poems, followed by a host of occasional pieces whose subjects are political, religious, historical, dedicatory, commemorative, and humorous, among others. There is next an impressive number of lyric poems on a wide variety of matters, secular and religious. There are also descriptive and narrative poems, a few quite long, and translations and parodies. Indeed, American poets seem to have felt that they might write on any subject at all, often with that degree of intimacy Frederick Nichols remarks of in Renaissance poets (pp. 1-3).

With some exceptions, the poems are couched in classical quantitative meters exhibiting a good grasp of prosody by the writers. In the fashion of the ancient poets, the American poet usually chose the meter traditional for his subject. The meter used most frequently by him is the so-called 'elegiac,' basically a dactylic measure in distich form. This the American poet, even more than the ancients, used for themes other than the pensive. This may well be in the manner of Anglo-Latin poets who, as Bradner points out (p. 8), in the use of meters generally 'showed much more variety than did the Romans.' Next in frequency is the dactylic hexameter meter, utilized for many purposes, including on occasion that of pure lyric. Lyric meters occur in rather surprising number and variety, and generally reveal in the skillful handling of their intricate patterns a fine competency of the poets.

The Latinity of the poems—syntax, diction, word order—is in large part classical and reflects a solid Latin training in the schools and colleges. Investigations, which indeed must yet be pursued in depth, seem to point to a fairly pervasive influence of classical Latin poets, chiefly Horace, Vergil, and Ovid, in matters of expression and style, and to much reminiscence of classical writers—perhaps in ultimate imitation of Renaissance Latin poets (Nichols, pp. 16ff.), which itself bears interesting comparison with the practice of medieval Latin poets (E. P. M. Dronke in Bolgar, ch. 16)—and of the Scriptures in the form of quotation and paraphrase.

It scarcely needs stating that a number of poems are of inferior quality, even when their texts are sound. They are nonetheless not excluded here, if only for the reason that Harold Jantz so wisely expressed concerning English-language verse (p. 176), 'The final critical sifting may well be postponed to a later date when all the material evidence has been gathered.'

Each item of the census is presented in a uniform fashion. First appears the designation of the author with dates or flo-ruit; then in quotation marks the first and last lines of the poem, their capitalization and punctuation modernized, under-scorings omitted, but spellings left unchanged. Thereafter, following the abbreviation T stands the original title in quotation marks; if no title exists in the source, a brief notice of the content appears in square brackets. After the abbreviation N the number of lines in the poem is indicated; after M, the meter; after S, the earliest known source(s) of the text; after B, the most important bibliographical references. Any further information of importance is presented after 'Note.'

- 1 Morrell, William (ca. 1590 – after 1626)

'Hactenus ignotam populis ego carmine primus.' 'Haec mea sublimis fuerint praesagia regni.'

T: 'New England, or a Briefe Enarration of the Ayre, Earth, Water, Fish and Fowles of that Country. With a Description of the Natures, Orders, Habits, and Religion of the Natives; in Latine and English Verse.' ¶ N: 909 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Edition published London, 1625, and in The American Apollo 1(1791):125–39. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 237; Leo M. Kaiser, 'On Morrell's Nov-Anglia', Seventeenth-Century News 18(1970):20. ¶ Note: An eight-line Latin elegiac preface entitled 'Lectori' stands above the poem. After the preface are the words 'Gul. M. Perlege: pars ultima, prima.' Above the first line of the poem is the title 'Nova Anglia.'

1637

- 2 Vincent, Philip (1600 – after 1637)

'Dicit in Americam varios gens Angla colonos.' 'Anglia nascentur, quae novus orbis erit.'

T: 'Ad Lectorem Authoris carmen εὐχαρίστικον de Victoria hac Nov'-Anglica, 1637.' ¶ N: 20 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Philip Vincent, A True Relation of the Late Battell Fought in New England, between the English and the Pequet Salvages (London, 1638). ¶ B: Jantz, pp. 269–70.

ca. 1638

- 3 Wilson, John (ca. 1588–1667)

'En, mihi fert animus patroni nomine vestri.' 'Sic nomen fiet dulce feraxque novae.'

T: 'In Pientissimum Reverendissimumque Virum Johannem Harvardum, e suggesto sacro Caroloensi ad coelos evectum, ad alumnos Cantabrigienses literatos poema.' ¶ N: 42 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 2:33. A later edition is in Benjamin Peirce, A History of Harvard University (Cambridge, Mass., 1833), Appendix, pp. 53–54; and in Samuel Eliot Morison, The Founding of Harvard College (Cambridge, Mass., 1935), pp. 224–25 (with a translation by Professor E. K. Rand). Morison dates the poem 'perhaps 1654,' Jantz (p. 279) 'later than 1638.' John Harvard died Sept. 14, 1638. ¶ B: Publications of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts, vol. 12, no. 8, p. 42 n., p. 43 n. ¶ Note: Preceding the poem is a Latin anagram.

edition in Kaiser 1974, pp. 352–53.

8 Fiske, John (1608–1677)

'Vita erat exemplar, jam mortuus ipse reliquit.' 'Quot vix ex uno, tot canonesque suos.'

T: 'In obitum Reverendissimi viri, eximiae tum eruditionis tum pietatis Domini Joannis Cottoni [1584–1652] etc.' ¶ N: 2 lines.
¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: ms commonplace book of John Fiske and descendants at Brown University Library. An edition of the poem is in Jantz, p. 121. ¶ B: Jantz, pp. 118, 208. ¶ Note: A Latin anagram precedes and an eight-line English translation follows the poem.

- 9 Rogers, Ezekiel (ca. 1590–1661)
‘Helluo, librorum, lectorum bibliotheca.’ ‘Thomas Dudleius conditur hoc tumulo.’
T: [Epitaph of Governor Thomas Dudley of Massachusetts Bay, d. July 31, 1653]. ¶ N: 8 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 1:135. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 247.
- 10 Bulkeley, Peter (1583–1659)
‘Ecce Dei nutu tellus pavefacta tremescit.’ ‘Sed cessent potius crimina nostra precor.’
T: [On an Earthquake; Oct. 29, 1653]. ¶ N: 16 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 1:404. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 185. Critical edition by Leo M. Kaiser, ‘Early American Latin Verse: “Epigram on an Earthquake,”’ Seventeenth-Century News 34 (1976):68–69.

ca. 1653

- 11 Fiske, John (1608–1677)
‘Omnibus es charus quibuscum vivere gaudes.’ ‘Demissus neci gemitus de pectore promant.’
T: ‘Thomas Parkerus. Anagr.: Charus es, promat.’ ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: ms commonplace book of John Fiske and descendants at Brown University Library. An edition of the poem is in Jantz, p. 123. ¶ B: Jantz, pp. 118, 208. ¶ Note: The couplet shows both metrical and syntactical error.

1654

- 12 Bulkeley, Peter (1583–1659)
‘Ultimus iste dies mensis, mihi primus habetur.’ ‘O utinam mihi sit mens nova, vita nova.’
T: [On his Birthday, Jan. 31, 1654]. ¶ N: 6 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 1:403. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 186.

1655

- 13 Fiske, John (1608–1677)
‘Impurum quicquid mundus desiderat ipse.’ ‘Puris et vivis, summaque pura capis.’
T: ‘In obitum viri tum pietatis tum integritatis probatae, simul et senio confecti, et fidelitate tecti Domini Samuelis Sharpii in ecclesia Salemensi nuper inspectoris, Carmen funebre.' ¶ N: 4 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: ms commonplace book of John Fiske and descendants at Brown University Library. An edition of the poem but with several simple typographical errors is in Jantz, p. 124. ¶ B: Jantz, pp. 118, 208. ¶ Note: A Latin anagram precedes and a four-line English translation follows the poem. The poem is signed 'Selah.' Sharp died May 3, 1655.

ca. 1668

- 35 Mather (?), Richard (1596–1669)

'[Me Sa]muell tenet ac—non est dubi[um] jur[er]e verum.'
'Edit verba liber, verba dedisse puta.'

T: 'Ad Lectorem' [not to steal a book]. ¶ N: 10 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter (last line elegiac). ¶ S: ms, blank leaf of Hebrew Psalter given to his son Samuel. Psalter's present location unknown. ¶ B: The Historical Magazine 4(1860):148; Jantz, p. 235.

- 36 Mather (?), Richard (1596–1669)

'Nullum turbavi; discordes pacificavi.' 'Laesus sustinui; nec mihi complacui.'

T: [Epitaph of Richard Mather]. ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 1:456. ¶ B: Not listed in Jantz. ¶ Note: As often in the Magnalia, the possibility exists that the Latin is borrowed.

1669

- 37 Shepard, Thomas (1635–1677)

'Vixerat in synodis, moritur moderator in illis.'

T: [Epitaph on Richard Mather, d. Apr. 22, 1669]. ¶ N: 1-line fragment. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Magnalia 1:455. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 259. ¶ Note: The line of Latin seems a paraphrase of what Mather (Magnalia 1:299) reports Melanchthon once said, 'Viximus in Synodis, et jam moriemur in illis.'

- 38 Bishop, John (1612–1694)

'Sincerus terris noster jacet ecce Matherus.' 'Haec amor atque dolor composuere meus.'

T: 'In Pium, Doctum, et Praeclarum Dorcestrensem Matherum' [Richard Mather (1596–1669)]. ¶ N: 14 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 1:458. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 181. ¶ Note: The poem is signed 'J. Episcopius.'

- 39 Browne, Joseph (1646–1678)
 ‘Integra post lapsum naturae dona Papistae.’ ‘Quid monstri genius posteritatis erit?’
 T: ‘An Protoplasti per lapsum amiserint Dona Naturalia? Affirmat
 Respondens Josephus Brownaeus.’ ¶ N: 14 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶

 ¶ B: Jantz, p. 246.

- 41 Chauncy, Charles (1592–1672)
 ‘Parce, Deus, populique tui miserere cadentis.’ ‘Inque sinus lachrymae fluminis instar eunt.’
 T: [Elegy on John Davenport (1597–1670)]. ¶ N: 20 lines. ¶
 M: elegiac. ¶ S: Yale ms of Edward Taylor’s poems. ¶ B: critical edition in Kaiser 1974, pp. 355–57; Parks, pp. 53–54, 84–85. ¶
 Note: A second Latin elegy on Davenport, entitled ‘Aliter,’ follows in the ms. See no. 42.

- 42 Chauncy, Charles (1592–1672)
 ‘Quantum vult Dominus nos observare tremendum.’ ‘Quando negare voles, non retinere vales.’
 T: ‘Aliter’ [A second elegy on John Davenport]. ¶ N: 20 lines. ¶
 M: elegiac. ¶ S: Yale ms of Edward Taylor’s poems. ¶ B: critical edition in Kaiser 1974, pp. 357–58; Parks, pp. 54, 86–89. ¶ Note:
 At the end of the poem are the words ‘Deflevit Carolus Chaun-ceus. P.’

1673

- 43 Adams, William (1650–1685)
 ‘Olim te fruitus, vivo mihi, candide, chare.’ ‘Certe. Iaces:
 Quid agam? Magni tacuere dolores.’

T: 'An Elegie upon the Death of Mr. Seth Flint' [May 12, 1673]. ¶ N: 2 lines, preceded by 10 lines in English. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: contemporaneous ms copy of Samuel Sewall's commonplace book at the New-York Historical Society. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 167 (edition of entire elegy), 179.

44 Shepard(?), Thomas (1635–1677)

'Gilberti hic tenuem, lectores, cernitis umbram.' 'Sicce detur nobis vivere, sicque mori.'

T: [Epitaph on Thomas Gilbert (d. Oct. 28, 1673)]. ¶ N: 4 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 1:597. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 259. ¶ Note: Above the Latin stands the proverbial sentiment 'Omnia praete-reunt praeter amare Deum,' which is found also at the end of Michael Wigglesworth's 'A Song of Emptiness,' in his The Day of Doom (Cambridge, 1662).

1674

45 Hoar, Leonard (1630–1675)

'En regis magni diploma insigne Jacobi.' 'Condignos vestro semine, rege, Deo.'

T: [On Harvard]. ¶ N: 22 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Broadside of Harvard Catalogus (Cambridge, Mass., 1674). ¶ B: Jantz, p. 218.

1677

46 Anonymous

'Si Sheparde, tuo nisi quae sint digna sepulchro.' 'Carmina nulla forent, carmina nulla forent.'

T: [Epitaph on Thomas Shepard (1635–1677)]. ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 2:121. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 290. ¶ Note: In his Latin commencement address of 1678, President Urien Oakes of Harvard included this couplet: 'Si, Sheparde, tuo nisi quae sit digna sepulchro / Nulla querela foret, nulla querela foret.' Cf. Leo M. Kaiser, 'The Oratio Quinta of Urien Oakes, Harvard, 1678,' Humanistica Lovaniensia 19(1970):495.

47 Eleazar

'Tentabo illustrem tristi memorare dolore.' 'Gaudia et humanis non referenda sonis.'

T: 'In obitum Viri vere Reverendi D. Thomae Thacheri . . .

18.8.1678.' ¶ N: 24 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 1:496. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 207; critical edition in Kaiser 1974, pp. 358–60. ¶ Note: Eleazar was an Indian student at Harvard, class of 1679.

1681

'Magna dabit qui magna potest; mihi parva potenti.' 'Parva que poscenti, parva dedisse sat est.'

T: [Couplet on the title page of [Cotton Mather], A Poem Dedicated to the Memory of the Reverend and Excellent Mr. Urian Oakes (Boston, 1682)]. ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ B: Sibley 3:42–43.

- 52 Tompson, Benjamin (1642–1714)

'Haec genitoris amor, matris reverentia possit.' 'Carmina, tutoris pauperis obsequio.'

T: 'Edmund Davie 1682' [Epitaph on Edmund Davie, d. 1681]. ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Contemporary ms copy of Samuel Sewall's commonplace book at New-York Historical Society. Edition in Jantz, p. 163. ¶ B: Jantz, pp. 161–63, 267. ¶ Note: In the first line perhaps ponit should replace possit. Eighteen lines of English verse precede the Latin.

1683

53 Corlet, Elijah (ca. 1610–1687)

'Nec ver perpetuum voluit Deus esse, perennem.' 'Perpetuo servet sanas atque inviolatas!'

T: 'In Obitum . . . Johannis Hull . . .' [d. Oct. 1, 1683]. ¶ N: 48 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Samuel Willard, The High Esteem Which God Hath of the Death of His Saints (Boston, 1683), last two pages. ¶ B: Jantz, pp. 192–93; critical edition in Kaiser 1974, pp. 363–66.

54 Anonymous

'Chara est pars restans nobis, et quando cadaver.'

T: [Epitaph on John Rogers, d. July 2, 1684]. ¶ N: 1 line. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Magnalia 2:17. ¶ B: Jantz, pp. 229, 291. ¶ Note: The Latin verse is preceded by twenty lines of Latin and one line of Greek prose.

55 Anonymous.

'Ille pius pastor, quo non praestantior unus.' 'Qui faciendo docet, quae faciendo docet.'

T: [Epitaph on Nathaniel Collins (1643–1684)]. ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Magnalia 2:141. ¶ B: Sibley 2:59.

1685

56 Mather, Cotton (1663–1728)

'Sic mihi contingat vivere, sicque mori.' 'Qui longe sequitur vestigia semper adorans.'

T: [On Nathaniel Collins, d. Dec. 28, 1684]. ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: elegiac and dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Cotton Mather, An Elegy on the Much-to-be-deplored Death of That Never-to-be-Forgotten Person, the Reverend Mr. Nathanael Collins (Boston, 1685), p. 20. ¶ B:

Jantz, p. 227, no. 2. ¶ Note: The Latin appears after the English elegy. The words 'Sic optat' introduce the second line of the Latin, which is followed by the phrase 'Qualis vita, ita Finis.'

1686

- 57 Edwards, Jonathan, the Elder, of Weymouth (fl. 1686)
 'Spina vir ille Dei, pastor pius ille, fidelis.' 'Clerice; pastor ades! non vocat ipse Deus?'

- 74 Sewall, Samuel (1652–1730)
 ‘Mitto tibi Psaltem Christum et sua regna canentem.’ ‘Et trahit: hinc Solymae moenia celsa Novae.’
 T: [Verses sent to Richard Henchman, Aug. 24, 1705, with Calvin’s ‘On the Psalms’]. ¶ N: 4 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Autograph ms of Sewall’s diary at the Massachusetts Historical Society. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 254.
- 75 Sewall, Samuel (1652–1730)
 ‘Oceani fluctus Anna moderante superbos.’ ‘Euphrates cedit, Roma relicta cadit.’
 T: [Occasional verse written Sept. 10, 1705]. ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Autograph ms of Sewall’s diary at Massachusetts Historical Society. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 254, no. 15; Gummere, p. 94. ¶ Note:
 Sewall sent the distich to Cotton Mather, who suggested ‘Anna’ be changed to ‘Christo.’ Sewall translated the distich into English verse with the new reading (Diary 1:528–29, n. 25, 530).
 The original Latin distich Sewall copied on the morning of September 21 in the margin of his copy of the September 10 Boston News-Letter, now at the Massachusetts Historical Society. Mather printed the revised couplet and a Latin couplet of his own as part of a poetic dialogue in Theopolis Americana (Boston, 1710), p. 53; see Jantz, p.
 233.
- 76 Sewall, Samuel (1652–1730)

 Autograph ms of Sewall’s letterbook, under date of Oct. 13, 1705, at the Massachusetts Historical Society. ¶ B: Jantz, p. 254. ¶ Note:
 Sewall in a letter to Richard Henchman encloses the distich and asks for his criticism. The distich is also found written in Sewall’s hand in the margin of his copy of the Boston News-Letter of Oct. 15, 1705, at the Massachusetts Historical Society.
- 77 Sewall, Samuel (1652–1730)

Kaiser, ed., ‘A Rediscovered Latin Poem of Nathaniel Gardner,’ Seventeenth-Century News 35(1977):70. ¶ Note: ‘Philomusae’ sent this translation by Gardner (of Isaac Watts’s ‘Ode on the Nativity of Christ’) to the editors of the Anthology, faithfully copied from Gardner’s manuscript. A preface of Gardner stated, ‘N.G. S.W. S.D. 1750: Haec ego, paucis abhinc noctibus, fugiente oculos Morphaeo, in lectulo condidi. Pignus istud, exiguum utcunque, amoris et observantiae, excipias quaequo. Tua Carmina, etc. Vale.’ But the poem was originally composed in 1739 and sent to Dr. Watts in England, who acknowledged it in 1740; cf. Sibley 10:367.

 653 (654, 655), where source of attribution is listed. ¶ Note: The poem was sent to the editor, Benjamin Franklin, by 'R.C.', who wrote that the author was too modest to publish it. It consists of three threnodies and an epitaphium. Below the epitaph is subscribed 'Augusti v. MDCCXLI.' See nos. 139, 140.
- 139 Lowry(?), William (fl. 1741)

The Duke of Cumberland fought the decisive battle of Culloden Apr. 15, 1746. Perhaps the work of a British writer.

1747

144 'Ephoros'

'Qui te cunque movit carmen dispendere tuum.' 'Deniges haec vera teste Philopartheno.'

T: 'Anglico Orphanio: Grasos grason eurisky!' ¶ N: 10 lines. ¶ M: imperfect dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: New-York Gazette or Weekly Post-Boy, May 18, 1747. ¶ B: Lemay 1972, no. 835. ¶ Note: This wretched verse is a rebuke of 'Anglicus Orphanius' for his verse identifying some lines of 'Philoparthenos'; see Lemay 1972, nos. 833 and 834. 'Orphanius' retorts in the issue of June 1, 1747; see no. 145. The last three words of the title are perhaps Ephoros's poor attempt at saying in Greek, 'Grasos grason heuriskei,' 'A fool finds a fool,' if Ephoros's intended meaning is not much more offensive. The expression does not seem to exist in Greek as a proverb.

145 'Anglicus Orphanius'

'Objicis egregiis mihi quae convicia nugis?' 'Sint modo rythmiano carmina scripta sono.'

T: 'To Ephoros. Men' moveat cimex Pantilius Hor.' 156 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

‘Carmina me poscis? dare vellem sed neque sacri.’ ‘Atque domum propero defessus. Vive valeque.’

T: ‘Ad Nathanael Gardner, A.M.’ ¶ N: 54 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: American Magazine and Monthly Chronicle for the British Colonies 1 (Jan. 1758):186–87; Beveridge, pp. 23–24. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 219; Lemay 1972, no. 1409. ¶ Note: The poem is subscribed ‘Falmouth, Id. Jan. 1753.’

1754

157 Gardner, Nathaniel (1719–1760)

‘O cui dulciloquam permisit Delius ipse.’ ‘Musa suis pedibus nostras Romana per oras.’

T: [On the tasks of a Latin teacher]. ¶ N: 201 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Harvard ms. Am.505. ¶ B: Leo M. Kaiser, ed., ‘Latin Teacher 1754,’ Classical Journal 63 (1968):300–303. ¶ Note: A poem sent in a letter of Feb. 4, 1754, to John Beveridge.

158 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

‘Pergis extremas, bone dux, in oras.’ ‘Sponte sequutum.’

T: ‘Ad Virum ornatissimum Gulielmum Shirley, Armigerum, Provinciae Massachusettensis Gubernatorem, Iter in orientales Novae-Angliae Partes parantem.’ ¶ N: 20 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶ S: Boston News-Letter, June 13, 1754; Beveridge, pp. 25–26. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 221; Lemay 1972, nos. 1189, 1488. ¶ Note: Some textual variants suggest that Beveridge revised his earlier copy.

159 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

'Grassante bello protegis Accadam.' 'Per memores tibi fama fastos.'

T: 'Ad Illustrissimum ac vera virtute et indigni doctrina ornatis-sum virum Gulielmum Shirley, Armigerum, Provinciae Massachusettensis Gubernatorem, etc. Post redditum suum a Conventu cum Indis orientalibus habito apud Falmouth, 1754.' ¶ N: 56 lines.
¶ M: Alcaic strophe. ¶ S: Boston News-Letter, Sept. 12, 1754, p. 2; Beveridge, pp. 26–28. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 221; Lemay 1972, nos.
1208, 1213, 1214, 1215. ¶ Note: A verse translation by 'Philo Muses' appeared in the Boston News-Letter, Sept. 26, 1754; in the Oct. 3, 1754, issue the Latin text was reprinted with still another verse translation.

160 Beveridge(?), John (1703–1767)

'Dum diu Eois retineris oris.' 'Nostra relinquas.'

T: 'Ad clarissimum Virum Gulielmum Shirley, Provinciae Massachusettensis Praefectum, ab Oris Nov-Angliae Orientalibus nobis jam tandem redditum.' ¶ N: 36 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶ S:
Boston News-Letter, Sept. 19, 1754, p. 2. ¶ B: Lemay 1972, no.
1210. ¶ Note: The poem is not signed, but several poems of Beveridge appeared at this time in this newspaper.

161 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

'Gallica cum rabies Europam Marte nefando.' 'Aoniusque chorus cythara donavit eburna.'

T: 'Ad Nobilissimum Virum Georgium Montague Dunk, Comitem
de Halifax, Provinciarum quae sunt ditionis Britannicae in America Praefectum, etc.' ¶ N: 97 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S:
Boston News-Letter, Nov. 21, 1754, p. 1; Beveridge, pp. 35–38. ¶
B: Kaiser 1963, p. 225, n. 45; Lemay 1972, nos. 1226, 1257. ¶
Note: The poem is subscribed 'Falmouth, Nov-Anglorum, Kal. Nov.
1754.'

ca. 1754

162 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

'Saxa quae ducant, Jonathan, sequaces.' 'Fata repensat.'

T: 'Ad Jonathan Mayhew, S.T.P.' ¶ N: 48 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic
strophe. ¶ S: Beveridge, pp. 28–29. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 219. ¶
Note: Mayhew (1720–1766) graduated from Harvard in 1744; see Sibley 11:440–42.

- 163 Lovell, John (1710–1778)
 ‘Spirans per agros lene Favonius.’ ‘Quem foliis puerum pa-lumbes.’
 T: ‘Ad D. Johannem Beveridge ad Rus Suum Iter Mari Parantem, Authore Johanne Lovel Bostoniensi.’ ¶ N: 44 lines. ¶ M: Alcaic
 strophe. ¶ S: Beveridge, pp. 30–31. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 220. ¶
 Note: On Lovell see the Dictionary of American Biography.
- 164 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)
 ‘Dum stupet Indus classe Britannica.’ ‘Tu calices genero-siores.’
 T: ‘Ad Nat. Gardner, A.M.’ ¶ N: 24 lines. ¶ M: Alcaic strophe. ¶ S: Beveridge, p. 33. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 220. ¶ Note: In his list of errata, Beveridge reads ‘Stupescit’ for ‘Dum stupet.’ The third stanza may refer to Sir William Johnson’s victory over the French at Lake George in Sept. 1755.

1755

- 165 B., C.
 ‘Ecce viator adest, ah me! quam pallidus ore.’ ‘Dum cornu resonat vobis vi surgite ad arma.’
 T: ‘Questus de Ohio.’ ¶ N: 26 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶
 S: Boston Gazette, Aug. 11, 1755, p. 3. ¶ B: Lemay 1972, no. 1266.
 ¶ Note: Preceding the poem are these words, ‘Messieurs Edes and Gill, Please to insert in your next, the following Lines on General Braddock’s shocking Defeat at the Ohio. Yours, etc. C.B.’ At the end of the poem is written, ‘Inscribatur / In enses vestras: / Pugnat et vincit Heros.’ The poem triggered criticism from ‘P.M.’ and an exchange of Latin verse obloquy between ‘P.M.’ and ‘C.B.’ See nos. 166–71.
- 166 M., P.
 ‘Infaelix nimium cecidit vetus Anglicus heros.’ ‘At tu iterum trucidas victum male fata canendo.’
 T: ‘Domino C.B., Obitum Illus mi Di Di Braddock Lugubri sane
 Carmine ploranti, Extempore.’ ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Boston Gazette, Aug. 18, 1755, p. 2. ¶ B: Cf. Lemay 1972, no. 1266, where, however, the present verse is not referred to. ¶ Note: The ‘mi Di Di’ in the title resulted from the typesetter’s misreading ‘Illustrissimi Domini Braddock’; the error figures largely in the verse exchanges between ‘P.M.’ and ‘C.B.’ A two-line

English verse translation of the Latin is appended by 'P.M.' Cf. no. 165.

167 B., C.

'Artibus omnimodis haec tempora sunt inimica.' 'Jam jam fama volat, nomen pervertitur ejus.'

T: 'Domino P.M.' ¶ N: 12 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Boston Gazette, Aug. 25, 1755, p. 2. ¶ B: Lemay 1972, no. 1267. ¶ Note: Between the title and the poem are the words 'Mi Di Di explanatur, Mirum diasyrticum didicisti; Anglice: Lest Master P.M. want employ, / Here's t'other Bone to pick, my Boy. A Touch on the Times to improve P.M.'s sarcastical Genius: At tu iterum trucidas, P.M. sarcastice cantat; / . . . Sic Tristes affatus amicos. / Hor. [Carm. 1:7.24].' Cf. no. 165.

168 M., P.

'C.B. conatur pimplaeum scandere montem.' 'Musae furcillis praecipitem ejiciunt.'

T: 'Mirifico Dictionum Divinatori Domino C.B. [Six lines of English verse]. Si tibi vendicent explanationem Errata Typographica, hoc modo explanantur Mi Di Di: Misellulus Dicaculus dicaris, Misere Dicteria Dispallantur(?), Mihi Displacentiam di . . . (?), Mictilis Dictorum distortor.' ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Boston Gazette, Sept. 1, 1755, p. 3. ¶ B: Lemay 1972, no. 1272, where, however, it is not recognized that the Latin couplet is an adaptation of Catullus 105. ¶ Note: A four-line English verse translation follows the Latin verse. Cf. no. 165.

169 B., C.

'In satyra nimium crudelis tu videaris.' 'Carcere conclusum, flagitat ipse suum.'

T: 'Domino P.M. Quicquid in buccam venerit [Martial 12:24.4-5]. English: The fool's bolt is soon shot. Mi Di Di hoc modo explanatur: Missellulo Diaboli Dicaculo.' ¶ N: 4 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Boston Gazette, Sept. 8, 1755, p. 3. ¶ B: Lemay 1972, no. 1273, where, however, an erroneous first line is cited. ¶ Note: After the Latin poem are the words 'Absit P.M.' and two sets of English verses, one a translation. Cf. no. 165.

170 M., P.

'Sit licet in satyra P.M. nimis acer et ardens.' 'Et C.B. spernit Tartareosque Deos.'

T: 'Misanthropico Ditis Dictatori Domino C.B., Homini trioboli. Non te emptum vellem Titivillito. Plaut.' ¶ N: 10 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Boston Gazette, Sept. 15, 1755, p. 2. ¶ B: Lemay 1972, no. 1275, where, however, the title is not given. ¶ Note: An English verse translation follows the Latin poem, then the comment, 'No more Scribbling.' For the echoes of Plautus in the title, see his Poenulus 381 and Casina 347. Cf. no. 165.

171 B., C.

'Asseris in satyra atroci te velle magistrum.' 'Posthac, mi P.M., parvus diceris Apollo.'

T: 'Domino P.M.' ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Boston Gazette, Supplement, Sept. 22, 1755, p. 2. ¶ B: Lemay 1972, no. 1280. ¶ Note: A four-line English verse translation follows, and the couplet 'Now, if you please, / Let Scribbling cease.' Cf. no. 165.

172 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

'Io triumph hic quid sibi vult frequens?' 'Laude dehinc merita virescat.'

T: 'Ad Gul. Shirley, Eq. aur. etc., cum rediret ab Oswego, etc.' ¶ N: 48 lines. ¶ M: Alcaic strophe. ¶ S: Beveridge, pp. 34–35. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 221.

ca. 1755

173 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

'Neglegis? At merui qua culpa? quid mihi tandem.' 'Vive, vale, semper sed memor esto mei.'

T: 'Ad _____' [A humorous rebuke to a neglectful correspondent]. ¶ N: 16 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Beveridge, pp. 38–39. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 224, n. 22.

ca. 1756

174 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

'Quas tu Camoenas quem vel Apollinem.' 'Namque brevi meliora spero.'

T: 'D. Johanni Lovell Johannes Beveridge, S.P.D.' ¶ N: 40 lines. ¶ M: Alcaic strophe. ¶ S: Beveridge, pp. 31–32. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 220.

1757

- 175 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

‘O quem futurum pectore finxeram.’ ‘Faucibus eripuere mortis.’

T: ‘Ad Sam. Quincauem, A.M., in obitum Magnae spei Juvenis, Nathanaelis Smiberti, etc.’ ¶ N: 64 lines. ¶ M: Alcaic strophe. ¶ S: Boston Gazette, May 2, 1757; Beveridge, pp. 44–46. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 220; Lemay 1972, no. 1373 (where other reprintings are listed), no. 1375. ¶ Note: The poem is subscribed ‘Hartford, Connectutensium, 1757.’

- 176 Sterling, James (1701–1763)

‘Tyndaridas fama est ventos sedasse furentes.’ ‘Id duo quod superum vix potuere potes.’

T: ‘Epigram’ [four lines of English verse turned into Latin]. ¶ N: 4 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: American Magazine and Monthly Chronicle for the British Colonies 1 (Apr. 1758):335–36. ¶ B: Lemay 1972, no. 1436; Lemay 1972M, p. 378. ¶ Note: The poem is signed ‘Kent in Maryland.’

- 177 Beveridge, John (1703–1767)

‘Mi chare Gardner, dic, Aganippidas.’ ‘Ambrosiam liquidumque nectar.’

T: ‘An Ode. By a gentleman in New-England, to his friend in Boston’ [Nathaniel Gardner]. ¶ N: 28 lines. ¶ M: Alcaic strophe. ¶ S: New American Magazine (Woodbridge, N.J.), 1 (Sept. 1758):234; Beveridge, pp. 24–25. ¶ B: Kaiser 1963, p. 219; Lemay 1972, no. 1493. ¶ Note: The poem may have been composed as an answer to Gardner’s letter and poem (see no. 157) of Feb. 4, 1754, and only later submitted for publication.

- 178 Sterling, James (1701–1763)

‘Ad Jovis arbitrium referunt duo numina causam.’ ‘Vindicet hic terram, fulminet ille mare!’

1772

235 'Pacificus Auctor et Mutuator'

'Daemonia obnixis precibus tum porro petebant.' 'Daemone possessis ab eodem facta fuerunt.'

T: [Translation of Matt. 8:31–33]. ¶ N: 10 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Boston News-Letter, Feb. 20, 1772, p. 2. ¶ Note: At the head of the poem are the lines: 'To the Monitor: Mr. Monitor, I am glad to find your spleen so far subsides that a trifling riddle cannot move your resentment. I now offer to your perusal the following important lines, which may be a seasonable lesson to us both. . . .'

236 'Fidelis'

'Ut malus ipse pater, proles pejor fuit illo.' 'Cui manet affixum indicium signumque tyranni!'

T: 'Apothegma' [On honoring the king]. ¶ N: 6 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Boston News-Letter, Mar. 12, 1772, p. 1. ¶ Note: Preceding the poem are remarks of the writer to the editor, lamenting the insults to authority and the king, followed by eighteen lines of a Latin dactylic hexameter poem, beginning 'Rex mi fide, precor, quod sis moderamine regni,' and ending 'Multiplici numero te tali principe digna,' on the accession of James I in 1603.

237 'Osculator'

'Da mihi centum.' 'His vel ocellis.'

T: [Ode on kissing]. ¶ N: 23 lines. ¶ M: Adonic. ¶ S: Maryland Gazette, July 16, 1772, p. 4. ¶ Note: Preceding the poem are these words: 'To the Printer: Sir, To such of your poetical correspondents as are fond of kissing during this hot weather, it probably will not be uninteresting to attempt a translation of the following short Latin ode, which I have set down from memory, not having the copy at hand.' The ode may be British. It is inspired by Catullus, Carmina 5.

238 Anonymous

'Fulmen uti rutilans annosas dejicit ornos.' 'Deciduas ponit pendula nocte comas.'

 faced by these lines: 'To the Printers, The enclosed poem was sent to me by a friend in the country t'other day. I beg you would give it a place in your paper; and perhaps some candidate for poetical fame will attempt a translation of it. The tale is laughable and has the merit of being true. Museus.' An unsigned English verse paraphrase appeared in the Gazette, Sept. 16, 1773.

248 Anonymous

'Somne levis, quanquam certissima mortis imago.' 'Vivere quam suave est, sic sine morte mori.'

T: 'Ad Somnum.' ¶ N: 4 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Massachusetts Gazette and Boston Post-Boy, Feb. 6, 1775, p. 4. The poem appears also in the Boston Magazine 1(Mar. 1784):202 (with a translation in the Apr. 1784 issue, p. 252, signed 'J.H.'), and in the Columbian Magazine or Monthly Miscellany 3 (Jan. 1789):55, with a translation. ¶ Note: The poem in the Gazette is prefaced with the words 'Messrs. Mills and Hicks: The following beautiful Address to Sleep, with the three attempts at a translation into English, may serve to fill up a corner of your next, if not pre-engaged by Politics. Yours, Clio.'

249 Anonymous

'Qui mare, qui terras et quod tegit omnia coelum.' 'Non potuit classis tuta probare deos.'

¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Royal American Magazine 2 (Feb. 1775):72.

¶ Note: The first line is an adaptation of Ovid, Metamorphoses 1:5.

250 Anonymous

'Te vocat Boston, ubi dux iniquus.' 'Indicus olim.'

T: 'In Geo. Washington, Ducis Supremi, Munere a Senatu Populoque Americano Donatum.' ¶ N: 16 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶

S: Pennsylvania Magazine or American Monthly Museum 1 (Oct. 1775):481; Leo M. Kaiser, ed., 'Two Latin Americana,' Classical Bulletin 38 (1962):74. ¶ Note: A preface to the poem states: 'Mr.

Aitken, If you judge the following irregular Ode worthy of a place in your Magazine, you may insert it.' The poem is subscribed 'Philadelphiae 6to Calendas Julii.'

1777

251 Parke, John (1754–1789)

'An vanis inscripta notis angustior urna.' 'Evocet aut manes laus et inanis honor?'

T: [Prefatory to Parke's English elegy on the death of Col. John Haselet (Hazlet, Haslet) of Delaware, near Princeton, Jan. 3, 1777].

¶ N: 6 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Hugh Henry Brackenridge, *The Death of General Montgomery at the Siege of Quebec: A Tragedy. Note: Parke appends the information, 'Bristol, Head Quarters, Jan. 14, 1777.' The Latin is a translation of stanza eleven of Gray's Elegy.

- 252 Parke, John (1754–1789)

‘Et generis jactatus honos, dominatio regum.’ ‘Scilicet ad lethum dicit honoris iter.’

T: [On the death of Brig.-Gen. Hugh Mercer near Princeton, Jan. 12, 1777]. ¶ N: 4 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Pennsylvania Evening-Post, Feb. 1, 1777, p. 1; repr. in Hugh Henry Brackenridge, The Death of General Montgomery at the Siege of Quebec: A Tragedy. With an Ode in Honour of the Pennsylvania Militia . . . , to which are added elegiac pieces commemorative of distinguished characters (Philadelphia, 1777), p. 70; [Parke, p. 227]. ¶ B: Kaiser 1965, pp. 220–30. ¶ Note: The Latin text in the Pennsylvania Evening-Post is signed ‘J.P., Jan. 31, 1777.’ The Latin precedes an English elegy by Parke on Mercer’s death. The Latin, finally, is a translation of stanza nine of Gray’s Elegy.

1778

- 253 Church, Benjamin, Sr. (1704–1781)

‘Incipiam lustrare virum, qui syderis instar.’ ‘Solvantur nati, nuper tellure repulsi!’

T: [An acrostic poem to John Hancock, asking for his son’s back salary]. ¶ N: 18 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: ms at Boston Public Library and at Massachusetts Historical Society; Leo M. Kaiser, ed., ‘An Unpublished Latin Poem of Benjamin Church,’ Seventeenth-Century News 25 (1967):42. ¶ Note: The poem is enclosed in a letter to Hancock of Mar. 28, 1778.

1779

- 254 ‘Threnodos’

‘Ecce Saul Jonathanque pares comitate nitebant.’ ‘Armaque bellantum clangorque perire tubarum.’

T: ‘Fata virosque canam: Tragoedia Saulis et Jonathanis in montem Gilbohae perpetrata, seu ploratio Davidis pathetica. 2 Sam. 1:23–27.’ ¶ N: 18 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Independent Ledger and American Advertiser (Boston), Feb. 1, 1779, p. 4. ¶ Note: Before the poem are the words ‘Messrs. Printers, Please to insert in your next the following lines, composed for the amusement of the learned, and I trust not ill adapted to the times, and thereby oblige, Yours, etc., Threnodos. Heu dies noster nebulosus est! Anglice: “Alas, the times are sad.”’ Six lines of verse follow: ‘The wife laments her husband dead, / The father mourns a son: / The orphan feels the want of bread, / And cries, my papa's gone! / Dolefull the scenes of this unhappy day, / While garments roll'd in blood the fields display.' The Latin verse is a paraphrase of the passage in Samuel.

255 P——e, J.

'Alma, ne credas sibi dedicato.' 'Dulce loquentem.'

T: 'Carmen Saphicum. P.V. In Puellam Adamatam.' ¶ N: 24 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶ S: United States Magazine: A Repository of History, Politics and Literature (Philadelphia), [1](June 1779): 283–84. ¶ Note: The poem is signed, 'Dubro undecimo Maia, 1779. J. P——e.' The 'P.V.' of the title perhaps stands for 'Praefectus urbi' or 'Praestantissimus vir.' The poet may be John Parke (1754–1789); see nos. 251–52, 266. 'Dubro' is probably the Latin for Dover, Delaware.

1781

256 Croswell, Andrew (1709–1785)

'Pulchra fuit conjux, semper dilecta marito.' 'Cum Christo in coelis erimus semperque beati.'

T: 'Carmina Lugubria. In Memoriam Dominae Rebeccae Croswell, Domini Croswell Uxor, nuper denatae: Cum Hymno Laudis ad Redemptorem. Ford, 'Broadsides, Ballads... Printed in Massachusetts, 1639–1800,' Collections of the Massachusetts Historical Society 75(1922):302; Sibley 8:405. ¶ Note: Croswell published a translation of his Latin poems to his wife in a broadside, Tender Latin Verses to the Memory of Mrs. Rebecca Croswell (Boston, 1782). See nos. 257–59.

257 Croswell, Andrew (1709–1785)

'Omes debemur morti, paulumque morati.' 'Cum Christo in coelis erimus semperque beati.'

T: [see no. 256]. ¶ N: 18 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ Note: This is the second of four poems on the broadside.

- 258 Croswell, Andrew (1709–1785)

'O multum orbato mulier dilecta marito!' 'Hoc finitur opus nunc hymno laudis ad illum.'

T: [see no. 256]. ¶ N: 35 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ Note:
This is the third of four poems on the broadside.

- 259 Croswell, Andrew (1709–1785)

'Christe, tibi grates festinat solvere dignas.' 'Post mortem in coelis semper, quia semper amabor.'

T: 'Hymnus Laudis non nuper compositus ad Redemptorem.' ¶ N:
6 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: see no. 256. ¶ Note: The Latin of this last poem on the broadside is subscribed 'Gloria Christo.'

gis Galliae Filio Seu Delphino Ludovico XVII. Nono Calend. Novemb. Anni Ae. S. 1781 Nato.' ¶ N: 240 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hex-ameter. ¶ S: see no. 260, pp. 7–16. ¶ Note: A set of fifteen notes in Latin explains different matters in the poem. The poem itself is markedly influenced by Vergil, Eclogue 4.

1784

262 Anonymous

'Quod fuit esse, quod est, quod non fuit esse quod esse.' 'Esse quod est, non esse quod est, non est, erit, esse.'

T: [Epigram on existence]. ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Massachusetts Centinel (Boston), Apr. 10, 1784, p. 4. ¶ Note: Following the Latin is a two-stanza verse 'Paraphrase.'

1786

263 Ross(?), James (1743–1827)

'Qualis in silvis dubius viator.' 'Numinis in nos.'

T: 'In Carolum Nisbet sacrosanctae theologiae doctorem ex gravi morbo convalescentem.' ¶ N: 32 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶ S: Carlisle [Pa.] Gazette and the Western Repository of Knowledge, Mar. 29, 1786, p. 3. ¶ B: James H. Morgan, Dickinson College (Carlisle, Pa., 1933), p. 50. ¶ Note: The poem is subscribed 'Carleoli, tertio Kal. Aprilis, 1786.' Ross was Professor of Latin and Greek at Dickinson College. A text of the poem appears also in The American Museum 2 (Oct. 1787):415.

264 Anonymous

'Non gladium, at faciem sequitur victoria, namque.' 'Plus valet armata Pallade nuda Venus.'

T: 'Epigram.' ¶ N: 2 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Massachusetts Centinel (Boston), May 10, 1786, p. 4. ¶ Note: Below the Latin appears a six-line verse 'Translation,' signed 'S.'

265 Sewall, Stephen (1734–1804)

'Somnus qui fessos reficit mitissimus artus.' 'Qui benedixisset mortalibus, et mihi lasso?'

T: 'Nocte Cogitata: Nocte I: De Vita, Morte, et Immortalitate.' ¶ N: 472 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: [Stephen Sewall], Nocte Cogitata, Auctore Anglice Scripta Young D.D., Quae Lingua Latii Donavit America (Caroloppidi, Massachusettensium [i.e., Charlestown, Mass.], 1786). ¶ Note: This is a translation of 'Night I' of the British poem by Edward Young (1683–1765) entitled 'Night Thoughts.' On p. [4] stand the words 'Congressus Americani Praesidis, Reipublicae Massachusettensi Praefecti, Joannis Hancock Nomen Prae Se Ferre Gestit America'—the word 'America' being here Sewall's nom-de-plume.

ca. 1786

- 266 Parke, John (1754–1789)

'Ferri secundo mens avet impetu.' 'Rite beans equitem sub antris.'

T: [Prefatory to Parke's translation of Horace, Carmina 2:20]. ¶
N: 8 lines. ¶ M: Alcaic strophe. ¶ S: [Parke], p. 74. ¶ B: Kaiser 1965, pp. 220–30. ¶ Note: Parke gives a verse translation of his Latin stanzas on p. 75. His translation of Horace is 'Addressed to the Hon. Major-General Varnum, Rhode Island.' No date is given.

1789

- 267 Anonymous

'Amphitheatralis rapimur spectacula scenaæ.' 'Hoc est pos-tremum, plaudite—abire licet.'

T: 'Vita Actio Est.' ¶ N: 6 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Gentlemen and Ladies Town and Country Magazine [1] (Mar. 1789):107. ¶ Note:
After the poem stand the words 'A Translation Is Requested.'

- 268 Anonymous

'Est mons sublimis qui tollit ad astra cacumen.' 'Per latum subiens multa pericla fretum.'

T: 'Mons Honoris Famaeque.' ¶ N: 20 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Gentlemen and Ladies Town and Country Magazine [1] (May 1789): 33–34. ¶ Note: After the poem are the words 'A translation of the above is requested.' One appeared in the Aug. 1789 issue, p. 170, by 'Rusticus' of Worcester, Mass., who seems to translate final lines not included in the May issue.

- 269 Anonymous

'Cum dat oluscula.' 'Lite repleta.'

T: [On Feasts]. ¶ N: 6 lines. ¶ M: accentual dactylic. ¶ S: Gentlemen and Ladies Town and Country Magazine [1] (May 1789):165.
¶ Note: The Latin verse stands at the end of an unsigned article 'On Feasts.'

- 270 Carey, John

'Inveni—et tenerae servatur munus amicae.' 'Acrior exarsit, dum pia verba dabat.'

T: 'Imitation of the Foregoing [Verses from Shenstone]' ¶ N: 14 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Columbian Magazine or Monthly Miscel- lany 3(Oct 1789):613. ¶ Note: John Carey presumably was also the author of no. 275. Shenstone's poem begins, 'I've found out a gift for my fair.'

271 Sewall, Stephen (1734–1804)

'Est Dominus pastor mihi; nunquam rebus egebo.' 'Atque domus Domini mihi in aeterna aeva manebit.'

T: 'Psalm. xxiii.' ¶ N: 12 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: [Stephen Sewall], Carmina Sacra Quae Latine Graeceque Condidit America (Wigorniae, Massachusettensis [i.e., Worcester, Mass.], 1789), p. 3. ¶ B: Duyckinck 1: 12–13. ¶ Note: 'America' is Sewall's pseudonym.

272 Sewall, Stephen (1734–1804)

'Vos, Domino benedicte, vos, illi ecce ministri.' 'Te beet ipse Jehova e celso monte Sionis.'

T: 'Psalm cxxxiv.' ¶ N: 6 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: [Stephen Sewall], Carmina Sacra Quae Latine Graeceque Condidit America (Wigorniae, Massachusettensis [i.e., Worcester, Mass.], 1789), p. 4. ¶ B: Duyckinck 1:12–13. ¶ Note: 'America' is Sewall's pseudonym.

273 Sewall, Stephen (1734–1804)

'En venusta es, cara mihi, en venusta es.' 'Cor rapuisti.'

T: 'Cantic Canticorum Capitis Quarti Versus Novem Piores.' ¶ N: 36 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶ S: [Stephen Sewall], Carmina Sacra, Quae Latine Graeceque Condidit America (Wigorniae, Massachusettensis [i.e., Worcester, Mass.], 1789), pp. 5–6. ¶ Note: 'America' is Sewall's pseudonym.

ca. 1789

274 Anonymous (James L. Kingsley?)

'En vir, cui meritas laudes ob facta per orbis.' 'Cantabunt soboles unanimique patres.'

T: 'Effigies clarissimi viri D.D. Elihu Yale Londinensis, Armigeri.' ¶ N: 8 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: James L. Kingsley, 'Sketch of the History of Yale College,' American Quarterly Register 8(1835):19. An identical text is in [Ezekiel Porter Belden], Sketches of Yale College (New York, 1843), p. 27. ¶ B: Duyckinck 1:86. ¶ Note: The Latin verse apparently was affixed in manuscript form beneath a portrait of Elihu Yale presented to the College in 1789 by Dudley

North, grandson of Yale. A Latin text with translations in various styles appeared in the Yale Literary Magazine 1(July 1836):186. The name 'Kingsley' is written in longhand over the Latin in the copy utilized for the American Periodical Series of Readex Microprint. Kingsley (d. 1852) was a famous professor of Latin at Yale.

275 'B., A.' (=John Carey)

' "Barbara pyramidum sileat miracula Memphis".' 'Sidera, fulgebit pyramis illa suis.'

T: [On the fifteen American States]. ¶ N: 14 lines. ¶ M: elegiac.
¶ S: Columbian Centinel (Boston), Dec. 26, 1792, p. 4, reprinted from the National Gazette (Philadelphia) of Philip Freneau, who translated the Latin in the Gazette of Dec. 15, 1792, with the title
'The Pyramid of the Fifteen American States,' and stated that John Carey of Philadelphia wrote the original poem. ¶ B: Frederick L.
Pattee, The Poems of Philip Freneau (New York, 1963; repr. of 1907 ed.), 3:82-83; Ruth W. Brown, 'Classical Echoes in the Poetry of Philip Freneau,' Classical Journal 45(1949):34. ¶ Note: Before the Latin text in the Centinel are the words: 'From the National Gazette;
Mr. Freneau, The state of Kentucky, having encreased the number of the emblematical stars, and afforded an opportunity of arranging them in a new form, I send you the following trifle on the subject.
The national motto, which I wish to include, will be a sufficient apology for writing in Latin. Yours, etc., A.B., Philad., Dec. 10.' Immediately below is a pyramid of stars, serving as a title. (Kentucky was admitted into the Union on June 1, 1792.)

1795

276 Cochran, William

'Avolet longe Boreas et omnis.' 'Ossa sepulchro.'

T: 'Ad celsissimum Principem Edvardum, Auratae Periscelidis, necnon Sti. Patricii, Equitem, etc.' ¶ N: 36 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe.
¶ S: Monthly Magazine and American Review 2(1800):79. ¶ Note:
Above the poem are these words: 'Original ode written by William Cochran, A.M., late Professor of the Greek and Latin languages in Columbia College, New York, now residing in Nova Scotia.' Below the poem are the words 'Hibernicus. Prid. Cal. Novm. A.D. 1795.'
An English verse translation is on the same page. Cochran, educated at Trinity College, Dublin, resigned from Columbia in 1789; cf. A History of Columbia University, 1754–1904 (New York, 1904), pp. 62, 64, 73.

T: [A love poem]. ¶ N: 24 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶ S: Port Folio Magazine (Philadelphia), 3 (Mar. 5, 1803):80. ¶ Note: The Latin is a translation of an original English poem printed above it.

1804

281 Ross(?), James (1743–1827)

‘Te quoque, qui nostris dignatus vivere, Nisbet.’ ‘Per terrarum orbem clara, negata mori.’

T: 'In obitum viri clarissimi Caroli Nisbet, D.D., Coll. Dickinson. Praesidis, qui octodecimo Januarii, A.D. 1804, vita decessit.' ¶ N: 42 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Port Folio Magazine (Philadelphia), 1 (May 31, 1806):336; reprinted in Joseph Henry Dubbs, History of Franklin and Marshall College (Lancaster, Pa., 1903). ¶ B: On Ross, who taught the Greek and Latin languages at Dickinson College, Carlisle, Pa., and Franklin College, Lancaster, Pa., see James H. Morgan, Dickinson College (Carlisle, Pa., 1933), pp. 98-104. ¶ Note: The poem is preceded by these words: 'Ad Gulielmum Hamilton, Salutem. Hos ego versiculos in memoriam viri integerissimi nec non et ex omnibus quos aetas praesens annis multis per orbem terrarum tulit doctissimi, tesserulam honoris typis ad te tuis mandandos mitto; quippe qui te facilem et commodum meis aliis occasionibus haud semel precibus dedisti.' The poem is subscribed 'Coll. Franklin, Lancastriae Kal. Mart. 1804.'

282 Anonymous

'Indulge lacrymis, orba Columbia.' 'Heu, nomen amabile.'

283 Anonymous

'Straddlepolitum celebrare lumen.' 'Orco redibis.'

T: 'In honorem Gulielmi Straddlepolis, armigeri, pro more veteris mei amici, Quinti Horatii Flacci.' ¶ N: 16 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶ S: Repertory (Newburyport and Boston), Oct. 5, 1804, p. 4. ¶ Note: The Repertory states the poem was copied from the Washington Federalist. The writer added three footnotes to the poem.

1805

284 Anonymous

'Somne veni, quanquam certissima mortis imago.' 'Vivere quam suave est, sic sine morte mori.'

T: [Lines to be placed under a statue of Somnus]. ¶ N: 4 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Literary Miscellany (Harvard), 1 (1805):196. ¶ Note: Preceding the poem are the words 'The following are four lines intended to have been placed under a statue of Somnus.' On p.

197 is a translation of the lines by Joseph S. Buckminster (1784–1812; A.B., Harvard 1800). Perhaps Buckminster wrote the Latin also; cf. nos. 248, 318. The Miscellany was edited by Harvard students.

285 Anonymous

'Huc ades, O saevum corporis arcere venenum.' 'Aegrotare vetat, nec doluisse sinit.'

T: 'De Variolae Vaccina.' ¶ N: 8 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Literary Miscellany (Harvard), 1(1805):197.

286 MacCarthy

'Miro viventes quo surgant ordine formae.' 'Ac sic arte tua miracula mille creatur.'

T: 'Egregio Pictori Domino Stuart qui inter graphicae artis principes praeclarus emicat tabulis spectatis ac admiratis.' ¶ N: 7 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Repertory (Newburyport and Boston), 1805; repr. in Monthly Anthology and Boston Review 2(Dec. 1805):658; Repertory (Newburyport and Boston), Jan. 7, 1806, with two versions of an English verse translation. ¶ Note: Footnotes identify the notable men painted by Gilbert Stuart (1775–1828), and referred to in the poem.

287 L. (=Lucius Manlius Sargent? [1786–1867])

'Nemo Deum vano confidens invocat ore.' 'Ille meus Dominus, sit Deus ille meus.'

T: 'Dominus Providebit.' ¶ N: 38 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Monthly Anthology and Boston Review 2(Mar. 1805):144.

288 Anonymous

'Una quod es semper, quod semper es optima conjux.' 'Una te nobis semper, Eliza, frui!'

T: 'Ad Elizabetham Semper Unam.' ¶ N: 8 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: The Literary Magazine and American Register (Philadelphia), 3(1805):232.

289 L. (=Lucius Manlius Sargent? [1786–1867])

'Cum tua te genetrix vitai ferret in auras.' 'Quam tibi pro meritis docta juventa favet.'

T: 'Ad virum clarissimum Herschelium.' ¶ N: 24 lines. ¶ M: elegiac. ¶ S: Monthly Anthology and Boston Review 2(Apr. 1805):195.

¶ Note: Preceding the poem, the editor wrote, 'The writer of the following lines (the same, we presume, who communicated the piece entitled "Dominus Providebit" in our last number) has caused us no little trouble in correcting his false quantities. Of similar faults in the other piece we forebore to complain; and as they were few, silently corrected them; but in the present there were so many negligences entirely unpardonable in any one who pretends to write Latin verse, that nothing but a sincere desire to encourage whatever wears the appearance of classical learning could have persuaded us to prepare it for insertion. When we solicit contributions for versifiers in any language, we expect that they, and not we [William Emerson] should take care of their prosody.'

290 Ross(?), James (1743–1827)

'Nempe tres vates totidemque seclis.' 'Junxit et ambos.'

T: 'Three Poets in Three Ages. Interpretatio Latina.' ¶ N: 12 lines.
 ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶ S: Port Folio Magazine (Philadelphia), 5 (July 6, 1805):208. ¶ Note: The poem was sent 'For the Port Folio.' It is subscribed 'Lancastriae, Pennsylvanorum, Nonis Jun. 1805.' The Latin is a translation of Dryden's 'Epigram on Milton' ('Three Poets in Three Different Ages Born').

291 'Lodinus'

'Arcturi stellae similis tu regna.' 'Semper arescit.'

T: 'Ad Serenam.' ¶ N: 5 lines. ¶ M: altered Sapphic strophe. ¶ S: Port Folio Magazine (Philadelphia), 3 (Oct. 19, 1805):327. ¶ Note: Preceding the title are the words 'Original Poetry for the Port Folio. Mr. Oldschool: Tho' the following trifle may evidence a degree of presumption in its author, yet should the conceit please you, you are at liberty to use it. The measure differs from the Sapphic only in the construction of the first foot in the 3rd and 4th lines.' A four-line verse translation follows the Latin.

1806

292 MacCarthy

'Tu qui magnanimos oculis mirantibus offers.' 'Pulcher inest animus tibi certe ad magna paratus.'

T: 'Americano Roscio.' ¶ N: 5 lines. ¶ M: dactylic hexameter. ¶ S: Repertory (Newburyport and Boston), Jan. 3, 1806, p. 3.

Preceding it are these words 'Hoc jucundum carmen scriptum fuisse dicitur A.D. 1742, et a Sam. Johnson in vita inter optima ingenii facinora poetae nostri numeratur. Hujus carminis figuram ab Horatio, Car. 35, Lib. I, captam esse, non negatum est, quamquam longe viribus in opere sequente Romano noster Anglus anteponeretur. Multa certe micantia quae in Anglicano carmine apparent, in his meis Latinis versibus sive non reperiuntur sive dubie coruscant.'

300 Sargent, Lucius Manlius (1786–1867)

'Ille multas divitias habet qui.' 'Altera sumit.'

T: 'Ad Licinium, nimium suis opibus inflatum.' ¶ N: 28 lines. ¶ M: Sapphic strophe. ¶ S: Repertory (Newburyport and Boston), Mar. 13, 1807, p. 2. ¶ Note: Written for the Repertory.
